LARGO,

INCLUDING LARGO (UPPER & LOWER) & LUNDIN.

LARGO is a parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, at the head of Largo bay, in the small debt court district of Leven, and contains the villages of Upper or Kirkton of Largo, Lundin Mill and Lower Largo, the latter a small seaport with a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, and another station is at Lundin Links, one mile from Largo. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Ceres, east by Kilconquhar and Newburn, and west by Scoonie. A striking feature in the landscape is Largo Law, a conical hill, rising to a height of 950 feet above the level of the sea, and green to the summit, where it is cleft in two. From its top a splendid view of the Firth of Forth, with its islands, and the opposite shore of the Lothians is obtained. The minerals worked are coal and limestone, the latter being most excellent in quality. There are in the parish two factories, one for cleaning flax and the other for spinning it. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch, and a Savings Bank is also established. Largo was the birthplace of Sir Andrew Wood, a celebrated admiral in the reign of James III. who presented the barony of Largo to him, in recognition of his services, and the shore for an extent of 5 miles is still claimed by his descendants. Sir John Leslie, the philosopher, was also born here. Within the grounds of Largo House is a conical-topped tower, which formed part of the old castle built by Sir Andrew Wood. This tower, it is said, was built by the prisoners taken by Sir Andrew in his sea fights. The bed of the canal is also visible down which Sir Andrew sailed to the parish church. Lower Largo was the birthplace of Alexander Selkirk, rendered famous by the pen of De Foe as "Robinson Crusoe." The house in which Selkirk was born stood here, but from its decayed state it was demolished. It was an ordinary cottage of one storey and a garret, and was stationed on the north side of the main street of Largo. A descendant of the name of Catherine Selkirk, was resident in this village until her death, which occurred in 1862. Mr. David Gillies, of Cardy works, also a descendant of the family, has erected, on the site of his birthplace, a life-size bronze statue to Alexander Selkirk, which was unveiled 11th December, 1885, by the Earl of Aberdeen. The tablet bears the inscription—"In memory of Alexander Selkirk, mariner, the original of Robinson Crusoe, who lived in the island of Juan Fernandez, in complete solitude, for four years and four months. He died 1723, Lieut. of H.M.S. Weymouth, aged 47 years." The Simpson Institute Hall, opened May 8th, 1891, a stone building in the old Scottish style, was erected by means of a legacy of £4,000, bequeathed by Mrs. Galloway in memory of her father George Simpson, of Upper Largo. It is for educational, recreative and social purposes, and contains public hall, library and billiard table, with grounds, bowling green and tennis court. The institute is controlled by a board of trustees. A hospital, which stands in the Kirkton of Largo, was erected under an endowment by a Mr. John Wood, a native; it is a building in the Elizabethian style. The intention of the founder was one of a peculiar nature—"any man or woman of the name of Wood" may have admission here, to whatever part of Scotland he or she may belong. The foundation provides the inmates with two rooms each, beds and bedding, and the produce of the gardens. The parish church has in the transept a stained window to the memory of Sir Andrew Wood, before named. A Celtic cross of unknown date, found in the parish in the year 1833 by General Durham, the then proprietor of Largo, stands now in the parish churchyard. Largo House is a spacious edifice, built in 1750, situated a little to the west of the village on a slope with southern aspect, amid richly ornamented grounds. The present occupier is Mrs. Fanny Aitken. The soil is partly of a light character, but more commonly of a black loam. The inhabitants are mainly devoted to agricultural pursuits, and the chief crops are wheat, oats, potatoes, rye and flax. John Gilmour esq. of Montrave, Major-General David Briggs and John Baxter esq. of Gilston, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 7,386 acres; rateable value, £14,305; the population in 1891 was 2,324 and in 1881, 2,234; of these 337 in 1891 and 346 in 1881 were in the Kirkton of Largo, and 590 in 1891 and 562 in 1881 were in Lower Largo, while Lundin Mill contained 492 and 477 in the respective years.

Lower Largo is a fishing village in this parish, one mile south-west from Upper Largo, 2½ miles north-east from Leven and 3½ south-west from Colinsburgh, on the shore of an indentation of the Firth of Forth, called Largo bay; it stands at the efflux of a rivulet named the Keil, whose estuary forms a harbour to the place. This harbour is now much in want of repair. A weekly corn market is held here.

Lundin Mill is a village adjoining Lower Largo, with a station called Lundin Links, on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section, of the North British railway, in this parish. It is a place of great antiquity. The house of Lundin has been taken down, but the square tower, which formed part of the ancient castle of Lundin, still remains. It was formerly the residence of a family of that name, who held property of great extent in the district as early as the reign of David II. Here also are the three "Standing Stones of Lundin." They are supposed to have once formed part of a Druidical temple, and to have occupied their present site for about 2,000 years. Letters through Largo.

LASSODIE, see BEATH.

LESLIE is a parish, a burgh of barony and police burgh and a manufacturing town, this latter being made up of the burgh of Leslie and the outlying districts of Croftouterly and Prinlaws; the town, which is governed by police commissioners, has in it the terminal station of the Markinch and Leslie branch of the North British railway, and lies along the summit of a ridge rising north of the Leven, 12 miles east from Kinross, 12 south-west from Cupar, 9 north-west from Kirkcaldy and 3 west from Markinch. The parish is in the poor combination of Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded north by Falkland, east by Markinch, south by Kinglassie, and west by Portmoak (Kinross-shire). The town consists principally of one street, running from east to west. It is an ancient place, often frequented by King James when holding court of Falkland; and here is the scene laid of the song of the "Jolly Beggars." The irregularity of its streets and architecture of the houses (being built with the gable ends to the street) are proofs of its age. Nearly all the dwellings are provided with gardens behind, and the streets are gas-lighted. At the eastern entrance to the town is a public green, which in former times was the scene of various pastimes, and the place of annual meeting for the pedlars or packmen of Scotland. The increase of this town is attributable to the prosperity of its manufactures, consisting of flax spinning, paper making and bleaching; the works of these are chiefly established on the banks of the Leven. There is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, established here. The places of worship are the parish church, a quoad sacra church at Prinlaws, the west end of the town, a Free and two United Presbyterian churches, and a Baptist chapel. There are two public schools in the parish. There is also a library consisting of about 1,100 volumes, known as the Leslie Institute Library, which is connected with the Young Men's Christian Association and Reading Room. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of April, and on the first Friday in October. Leslie House, at the east end of the town, is the residence of the Hon. George Waldegrave-Leslie. The Hon. George Waldegrave-Leslie and George D. Douglas-Clephane esq. of Strathendry, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,028 acres; rateable value, £16,949; the population in 1891 was 3,886, including 3,421 in the town, and in 1881 was 4,345, including 3,853 in the town; the 3,421 persons in the town in 1891 were divided into 2,177 in the police burgh, 997 in Prinlaws and 247 in Croftouterly.

LEUCHARS is a parish lying on the sea coast to the north of St. Andrews bay, and a village or kirktown, 5 miles north-west from St. Andrews, having a station on the St. Andrews, Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and half a mile south is the station of Leuchars junction, on the North British main line. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, is about 5 miles from north to south by the same extent in width, and is bounded on the north by Forgan and Ferry-Port-on-Craig, west by Logie and south by the Eden. The Established church is very ancient, and considered one of the most perfect specimens of Norman architecture in Scotland; it is supposed to have been erected in the 12th century. There is also a Free church in the parish. The village also contains a building called the Pitcairn Institute, the gift of Mrs. Pitcairn, of Pitcullo; it contains library and reading rooms, and has recreation grounds attached to it. Guard Bridge is partly in this parish and partly in that of St. Andrews; the Guard Bridge Paper Co. Limited, have extensive works here, and there is a station on the North British railway. Balmullo, a small village, is also in this parish. Near Leuchars there is the old castle of Earlshall, which has been recently restored by its owner, R. W. R. Mackenzie esq. The parish comprises 13,354 acres; rateable value, £20,109; the population in 1891 was 2,370, including 68[illegible] in the village of Leuchars and 524 in that of Guard Bridge, and in 1881 the parish had 2,185 inhabitants, the village 588 and Guard Bridge, 320.

LEVEN is a town in the parish of Scoonie, divided by the river Leven into two portions, the larger being the police burgh of Leven, and the smaller one the suburb of Inner Leven. The Leven river, which here runs into the Firth of Forth, and is crossed by a bridge, forms a good harbour, and a dock capable of taking in vessels up to 400 tons burthen has been constructed at a cost of £40,000; it is 500 feet long by 250, and was opened in January, 1880. The town, which is the head of a small debt court district, is 9 miles north-east of Kirkcaldy and 3 south-west from Largo, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The town is irregularly built, and consists of three main streets and a collection of houses bordering the links, where three golf clubs are established, one of them having recently erected a new club house. The police burgh is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 9 councillors. The sheriff holds a small debt circuit court here, the day after the second Monday in January, April and July, and Friday after the first Monday in October. The principal imports are flax, tow, barley, linseed, bones and timber. The staple trade of Leven is the preparation and spinning of flax and seed crushing, paper making, engineering, &c. the mills of the first-named trade, especially, employing a considerable number of hands. A bone dust mill, salt works and rope making are the other leading branches carried on here and in the vicinity. There are some large collieries in the district, and the Fife Coal Co., whose offices adjoin the railway station, are one of the principal employers of labour in Leven. There are branches of British Linen Co.'s Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland in the town. A fair is held on the Thursday after the third Monday in July. Inner Leven, connected with Leven by a stone bridge over the Leven, has, in conjunction with Buckhaven and Methil, been made into a police burgh. The Greig Institute is a substantial building, erected in 1873, by public subscription, and contains news room, library, billiard room, and class room for technical subjects under Government examination; the scheme originated as a People's Institute, and its name and history are associated with Mr. Greig, of Glencarse, who gave the site and £1,000 towards the building fund. There is an Established church, also a Free church and churches for the United Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Baptists. A large public school was erected in 1893, at a cost of £10,000, for 1,200 children, the average attendance being about 1,000. A bequest by the late Edward Boase, of Leven, of £500, yields a bursary of £25, tenable for three years, and the late Alexander Balfour, a former resident of Leven, left £12 per annum for three bursaries for boys or girls. The Caledonian hotel is near the bay shore, and has a large posting establishment attached. The "Leven Advertiser" is published every Thursday, price one halfpenny. The rateable value of the town is £25,157; the population in 1891 was 4,577, viz. 3,998 in the police burgh and 579 in the suburb of Inner Leven, and in 1881, 3,568, or 3,067 and 501 respectively.

MARKINCH is a parish extending 5 miles from north to south by 2 to 3 in breadth, in the poor combination of Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and bounded north by Kettle, east by Kennoway, south by Dysart and Wemyss, and west by Kinglassie and Leslie. Its kirktown, which has a station on the main line of the North British railway, lies 10 miles south-west from Cupar, 8 north from Kirkcaldy and 6 west of Leven, and is a police burgh and is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners. It occupies an open situation on a piece of irregular rising ground, and on the highest part is seated the church. There are extensive paper mills, bleachfields, a woollen manufactory and corn mills in active operation. The districts round abound in coal. In the village there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and of the Royal Bank of Scotland. There is a town hall and a public school. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and one for the United Presbyterians. The parish is traversed by the streams of the Leven and the Ore, and the great road through the county crosses it. The North British railway is carried over the first-named river by means of a viaduct of ten arches, nearly 90 feet in height. Balgonie Castle, the property of Charles Barrington Balfour esq. of Newton Don, is an edifice of great antiquity and strength; it stands on the south bank of the Leven, in the midst of some finely-wooded grounds. About half a mile to the east is Balfour House, recently bought by Charles Barrington Balfour esq. of Balgonie colliery. From a historical point of view, this fact is very interesting, as, after a lapse of seven centuries, the estate of Balfour becomes the property of a direct descendant of the family. It is at present rented by Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. D.L., J.P.; it is surrounded by pleasing enclosures and plantations and in a delightful situation. Balbirnie is an elegant mansion, the seat of John Balfour esq. and lies about half a mile north-west of the village. John Balfour esq. of Balbirnie and Charles Barrington Balfour esq. of Balgonie and Newton Don, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,821 acres; the population in 1891 was 6,377, and in 1881, 5,863; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 1,350, and the rateable value of Markinch, with Windygates, is £37,881.

Windygates, now the head of a post district, in this parish, stands on the high road between Markinch and Leven, about 2 miles west from the latter. Contiguous to the village is the extensive distillery of the Distillers' Company, Limited. Close to Windygates is Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway. Population in 1891, 453.

Woodside, in the parish of Markinch, is a small village about one mile and a half south-west from Markinch, its post town, and 2 from Thornton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed at the paper mills and bleachfields in the neighbourhood. Population in 1891, 205. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

Miltown, or Milton of Balgonie, is a village about midway between Windygates and Markinch, in the parish of Markinch, and quoad sacra parish. There are an Established church, a public school, and a sub-post office. Population in 1891, 361. The nearest railway station is Markinch, a mile and a half distant.

Coaltown, or Coalton of Balgonie, lies one mile and a half south from Markinch, its post town and parish. The inhabitants are principally employed at the Balgonie colliery and bleachfields in the immediate neighbourhood. There is a public school. Population in 1891, 568. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

Thornton is a village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Markinch, near the south-eastern extremity of the parish, and close to the Thornton junction on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British and the Leven and East of Fife railways, which have a joint station here. The Dysart Combination Poorhouse, erected in 1862, at a cost of about £6,000, is about half a mile from this village, and is capable of receiving 130. There are also a chapel of the Established church, a school and a post office. Population in 1891, 607.

Balcurvie is situated on an eminence about half a mile from Windygates, its post town, in the parish of Markinch, about 3 miles east from the latter place, one mile south from Kennoway, and half a mile from Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway. Population in 1891, 249.

ISLE OF MAY. This small island, 1 mile by three-quarters, which contains a lighthouse, visible at 21 miles, and is not attached to any parish, though included in the county of Fife, lies in the mouth of the Firth of Forth, 6 miles south-east of Cellardyke and the same distance south-east by south from Crail. There are some remains of a monastery. The population in 1891 was 27, and in 1881, 22.

MILTOWN, see MARKINCH.

MONIMAIL is a parish, in the northern part of the county, its kirktown being 5 miles west of Cupar; it is in the small debt court district of Cupar. It is bounded on the north by Dunbog, Creich, and Moonzie, on the south by Cults and Collessie, on the east by Cupar, and on the west by Abdie; it is 5 miles from north to south by a breadth of 4. Collessie, on the Perth and Ladybank section of the North British railway, is the nearest station. The name of the parish is supposed to be derived from the Celtic word Mon or Monath, a hill—the latter part signifying a mile or meal, or meille, amid. The northern parts consist of a fine range of hills, the highest of which is called Mount Hill. A monumental pillar to the late Earl of Hopetoun, standing upon its summit, is a plain Doric column, 92 feet in height, surmounted by a square capital. It is hollow within, and has a narrow spiral staircase by which there is an ascent to the top, whence a fine view of the valley of the Eden and the Firths of Forth and Tay is obtained. The greater portion of the parish is in a high state of cultivation, the remainder being pasture and woodland. The parish church at Monimail is a handsome building, and contains nearly 600 sittings. There is also a Free church at the Bow of Fife, and two public schools. Fernie Castle, a place of great antiquity, is supposed to have been one of Macduff's castles, and has evidently been a place of considerable strength; it is now the residence of Major Francis W. Balfour. Miss Leslie Melville, of Melville, The Earl of Leven, Major Balfour, of Fernie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,554 acres; rateable value ; the population in 1891 was 769, and in 1881, 834.

Bow of Fife is a hamlet in the parish, 1½ miles south-east from the kirktown. Springfield is the nearest railway station, miles distant.

Easter Fernie is a hamlet in the parish. Cupar is the nearest railway station, 3½ miles distant.

Letham is a village in the parish. The nearest railway station is at Collessie.

NEWBURGH is a royal burgh and a parish on the south shore of the Firth of Forth, 33 miles north from Edinburgh, 11 south-east from Perth, 10 north-west from Cupar, and a station on the Ladybank, Newburgh and Perth section of the North British railway. The town consists of one long street in the direction of east and west, parallel with the course of the river, and a lane or two leading towards the shore, where there are quays for shipping, and a spacious harbour. The Tay above here being navigable only for vessels of about 200 tons, those of greater burthen put in here to discharge their cargoes, which are sent to Perth by lighters. That the town is of considerable antiquity is unquestionable. According to some authorities its origin is ascribed to the fostering patronage of the adjacent abbey of Lindores, founded in 1178 by David, Earl of Huntingdon, on his return from the Holy Land. In the year 1266 the town was erected into a burgh of regality, and in 1631 Charles I. granted to the place a charter, forming the community into a royal burgh. There is, however, no evidence of it ever having sent a member to the Scottish parliament. The government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies and fourteen councillors, with a treasurer and a town clerk; it is the head of a small debt court district and a police burgh. The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south, by 1 to 2 broad, is bounded east by Abdie, south by Collessie, and west by Perthshire. Newburgh has risen very considerably in wealth and outward appearance. There is a branch banking establishment—the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, also a Savings Bank in connection with the bank. The manufacture of linen goods may be considered the staple trade of the place, exclusive of which the business in corn and timber is considerable; of the former especially large exports are made, and there is a large floor cloth factory. The benefits derived from the salmon fishery and from the sale of fruit also add considerably to the trade. The name of Newburgh is supposed to be conferred upon it in contradistinction to the ancient decayed burgh of Abdie, which lies about two miles to the west. Formerly the greater proportion of the habitations were low-built and roofed with thatch, but of late years a better style of architecture has prevailed, and there are now many good houses. The Town Hall stands near the centre of the town. The Laing Institute, with which is incorporated the Free Library, owes its origin to a bequest of £1,000 for the building, and £400 as an endowment fund, together with his own valuable library bequeathed by Alexander Laing LL.D. of this town. The building was erected in 1895. In the High street is a fountain in memoriam of John Livingstone, of Edinburgh, for his many gifts to the town; this gentleman was the donor of the Livingstone Hall, a building in the Cupar road. The places of worship comprise a church of the Establishment, St. Catherine, erected in 1833, a United Presbyterian and Evangelical Union churches, a Baptist chapel, and an Episcopal Mission Hall. A fair is held on the third Friday in June. There are two ancient crosses within the parish, one at Mugdrum, about thirteen feet high, and the Macduff cross, or rather the pedestal of it, of great interest, from its having been granted to Macduff as a sanctuary, for his successful aid against Macbeth. About a mile to the east are the remains of the abbey of Lindores. The unfortunate Duke of Rothsay, who was starved to death in Falkland Palace, was buried here. Several stone coffins have at different times been discovered, and are still to be seen. Edmund Balfour Hay-Patterson esq. of Mugdrum, and Robert Cathcart esq. of Pitcairlie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,365 acres; rateable value (including the burgh), £7,804. The population in 1891 was 1,812, including 1,506 in the royal burgh, and in 1881, 2,191, including 1,852 in the burgh.

NEWBURN is a parish, on the north-east coast of Largo Bay, its kirktown being two miles north-east from Largo, 5 from Leven, and 10 south-by-west from St. Andrews. The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south by 1½ breadth, is in the small debt court district of Leven, and is bounded north and west by Largo, east by Elie and Kilconquhar, and south by the Bay of Largo. The nearest railway station is at Largo on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. Three-fourths of the land is under cultivation, and the inhabitants are dependant on agriculture for employment. J. Anstruther-Thomson esq. and W. Baird esq. of Elie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,040 acres; rateable value, £4,954. The population in 1891 was 322, and in 1881, 344.

NEWPORT AND WORMIT.

NEWPORT, a handsome village and a police burgh, in the parish of Forgan, stretching along the Firth of Tay, is picturesquely situated, directly opposite to Dundee, and about 2 miles south therefrom, and 3 south-west from Tayport, the ground sloping upwards to a considerable height from the river Tay. Many villas have been erected here; and as there is constant communication with Dundee by railway since the opening of the Tay Bridge, and also by the steamers which ply hourly, and the climate being salubrious and comparatively mild, it has now become a popular suburb of Dundee. Newport was made a burgh in November, 1887, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. It possesses five churches, a commodious public hall, erected at a cost of £4,000, and a Board school, built in 1878 for upwards of 400 scholars. The south end of the Tay Bridge is at Wormit, about a mile to the west of Newport. There is a station on the North British railway at East Newport for goods and passengers, and one at West Newport for passengers only. Population of Newport in 1891, 2,700.

Wormit is pleasantly and conveniently situated for Dundee business men, as there is a station here on the North British line, and many villas overlooking the river have been erected since the opening of the Tay Bridge. There have been two Mission churches, one under charge of Forgan Established Church, and one from the Newport Free Church, erected this year (1895) in Wormit.

PITLESSIE, see CULTS.

PITTENWEEM is a seaport, a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, and a small parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, extending from east to west; it has a small harbour for vessels drawing under 12 feet, and a station on the Thornton Junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Crail, 10 south-east from St. Andrews, 20 north-east from Kirkcaldy and 14 south-east from Cupar; it unites with the two Anstruthers, Crail, Cupar, Kilrenny and St. Andrews in returning one member to Parliament, and is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 8 councillors, who are also the police commissioners. The parish, which is in the small debt court of Anstruther, is bounded north by Carnbee and Anstruther Wester, east by the Anstruthers, south by the Firth and west by St. Monance. The burgh, which was originally attached to a priory, the remains (chiefly the domestic offices) of which stand on a hill above the harbour, was created a royal burgh in 1537 by James V. and confirmed by Charles I. It consists of three good streets, with a few bye thoroughfares, the houses generally bearing an ancient aspect. Adjacent to the Monastic ruins stands the parish church, an old edifice with a turreted spire. From the time of being erected into a royal burgh until 1639, it appears that Pittenweem was a place of considerable note and trade; but from that period to the year 1645 it suffered severely, no fewer than thirteen sail of large vessels belonging to this port having been either taken by the enemy or wrecked. It was here that the robbery was committed upon the collector of the excise by Wilson and Robertson, which led to the outrages of the Porteous mob and the consequent catastrophe; the house in which this transaction took place is still standing on the north side of the street, north of the church. It is a fishing station of some importance and fish curing is carried on rather extensively, in addition to which the trade in grain and potatoes is of some consequence; there are also two large cooperages, with sail making. A survey of the district has been made recently (1895) by Mr. Galloway, mining engineer, of Cardiff, with the view of reopening the coal fields in this and St. Monance parishes; in his report he gives reason to hope this industry may be again started in the district. Coal was obtained in these parishes some 100 years ago, but the flooding of the mines stopped the undertaking. There are branches of two banks here, the National Bank of Scotland Limited (branch), High street, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited (a sub-branch to Anstruther), in James street. Balcaskie Castle, the seat of Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. stands on a rising ground between St. Monance and Pittenweem. The grounds are extensive and thickly wooded. Walter Douglas-Irvine esq. J.P., D.L. of Grangemuir, Sir Ralph William Anstruther bart. J.P., D.L. of Balcaskie, and George Hannay esq. of Kingsmuir, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 663 acres; rateable value, including burgh and landwards, £5,564 17s. 2d.; the population in 1891 was 1,991, and in 1881, 2,119; these figures also represent the population of the royal burgh, it being counterminous with the parish, though the parliamentary and police burghs are a little smaller, and contained in 1891, 1,962 persons.

ST. ANDREWS,

WITH ST. LEONARDS.

ST. ANDREWS is a seaport, royal burgh and parish, extending 9 miles along the shore of its bay, and is from 1 to 3 miles in depth, bounded south by the parishes of Dunino, Cameron, Ceres and Kembach, east by Kingsbarns and west by Leuchars. This ancient city, seaport, royal burgh and university town lies on the shore of the bay, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, which here forms a junction with the section running via Leuchars to the Tay bridge and the north, 39 miles north-east from Edinburgh, 10 east by north from Cupar and 10 north-west from Crail. St. Andrews was created a free (royal) burgh, by virtue of a charter conferred by David I., which was confirmed by Malcolm IV.; this latter charter, together with the silver keys of the city, and the axe which was used for the decapitation of Sir Robert Spottiswoode and some other royalists, are still to be seen in the Town Hall. The city is governed by a provost, a dean of guild and four bailies, twenty-two councillors and a treasurer, and is the head of a small debt court district. The burgh unites with Cupar, the Anstruthers, Kilrenny, Pittenweem and Crail in sending one member to the Imperial Parliament. There are three principal streets; North street, which contains some fine buildings, including those of the University; Market street, which runs through the middle of the town; and South street, a spacious thoroughfare lined with trees, extending from the old west port to the ruins of the ancient cathedral. From the tower of the church of St. Regulus, a structure of the early 12th century, 109 feet in height, there is a beautiful view of the Bell rock, the bay, the city and the surrounding country. The ruins of the once formidable castle, the scene of Cardinal Beaton's cruelty to others, and of his own assassination, lie towards the north-east and jut out into the sea. On the shore to the westward is a small eminence called the Witch Hill, the place where those convicted of witchcraft suffered. Near this spot is a monument raised in 1842 to the memory of the martyrs, Wishart, Mill and others. It is in the form of an obelisk, and is 30 feet in height. The ruins of the Blackfriars Convent stand by the Madras college. St. Andrews at one time had an extensive foreign trade, having from thirty to forty trading vessels. The harbour is not large, and is very difficult of access, but safe for anchorage; its most dangerous wind is from the north-east. The export traffic is chiefly in potatoes and grain, and the import in coals, pavement, timber, &c. Six banking establishments are in operation here, namely, branches respectively of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the Cheque Bank Limited, also a branch of the National Security Savings Bank. Golf, one of the national games of Scotland, has its stronghold in St. Andrews, the Royal and Ancient Golf Club having been established in 1754; the Queen is patroness, and it numbers upwards of 800 noblemen and gentlemen as its present members; they hold two great meetings annually. The principal hotels are the Royal, in South street; the Star and the Cross Keys, in Market street; the Golf and Rusack's Marine hotel, both on the Links facing the sea; the Imperial, in North street and Murray park; the Alexandra, in Alexandra place and the Grand. The Memorial Cottage Hospital for medical and surgical cases, is in Abbortsford place, supported by voluntary contributions; hon. sec. and treasurer, Andrew Syme esq.; medical officers, R. & J. W. Moir M.D.'s. A hospital, the gift of the late William Gibson, for aged, infirm and sick persons, has been erected in Argyle street, at a cost of £4,000; it was opened in January, 1884. There are four public halls, viz., the Town Hall, in South street; the City Hall, in Church square; the Good Templar Hall, North street and the Rifle Volunteers' Hall, in Alfred place, the last-named and the Town Hall being large structures, suitable for entertainments and public meetings. Nearly opposite St. Mary's College, on the north side of the street, stands the town church, originally built by Bishop Turgot, in 1112, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity; it is a large but inconvenient edifice about 150 feet long by 60 wide. The present building was erected in 1800 upon the foundations of the old one, and the interior of late has been very much improved. Within the door, and on the right side, is the superb monument to Archbishop Sharp, erected by his son in 1679; this is composed of white marble, the figure of the prelate is represented in the attitude of kneeling, and below is exhibited, in relief, the assassination of this ecclesiastical dignitary. It was thoroughly repaired in 1850 at an expense of about £100. Besides the two parish churches, an additional one has been erected. There are also Free, Episcopal and United Presbyterian churches, and Baptist, Independent and Roman Catholic chapels, and at the end of South street are the ruins of the ancient cathedral and the priory.

The legendary history of this see ascribes its foundation to the translation hither of the relics of St. Andrew, by the hands of Regulus, a monk of Achaia, who, about A.D. 370, is said to have been miraculously guided to this spot, but its actual establishment is with much greater probability attributed to Acca, bishop of Hexham, A.D. 709-39, who settled here as a refugee from his own diocese, then ravaged by the Danes. The cathedral of St. Andrew, now a complete ruin, was connected with the ancient Culdean monastery once existing here, and with the later Augustinian priory, founded in the 12th century. It was begun in 1160, and consisted of a nave of twelve bays, transepts with eastern aisles, choir of six bays with aisles, eastern lady chapel and a central tower, 108 feet high; the total length of the church being 377 feet; the monastic building adjoined on the south side. Of the original Norman work there remains the east end of the lady chapel with its flanking turrets, the bases of some of the piers in the choir, the west and south walls of the south transept, and part of the south wall of the nave, the rest of which and what remains of the west front date from the period 1271-9; beyond these portions scarcely anything now exists. Of the priory, nothing is left save the south wall of the chapter house, its vestibule, and some walling adjacent; the cloister garth was 132 feet square, with an alley on each side; the precincts were enclosed by the existing wall, built 1522-35, and continued along the south-east side of the town; this fine work, reared by Prior Hepburn, includes 14 round or square towers, each with an external niche, and once had a corbelled battlemented parapet. The destruction of the cathedral and the priory has been attributed to the fanatic violence of Knox and his adherents, but recent examinations of the site have suggested that its collapse was really due to the inherent weakness of its construction; in or about 1887 the plan of the cathedral was discovered by excavation, and is now marked out on the turf. The see of St. Andrews was raised to the dignity of an archbishopric in 1466, Patrick Graham, then bishop of Brechin, being appointed the first archbishop. After the Revolution of 1688 the see was abolished, but was revived in 1844, in place of the intermediate see of Fife, which existed from 1726 to 1844, and it now includes also Dunkeld and Dunblane. The market is held on Monday, and the fairs (for cattle and hiring) on the second Tuesday in August and the first Monday after the 10th of November. The area of the parish comprises 11,482 acres; rateable value of St. Andrews burgh, including St. Leonards, £42,708; the population of the parish of St. Andrews in 1891 was 7,987, and of St. Leonards 768, and out of these the royal burgh contained 6,853; in 1881 the figures were St. Andrews, 7,835; St. Leonards, 769 and the burgh, 6,406; the area of St. Leonards is computed at 1,008 acres.

St. Leonards is a small parish so intersected by that of St. Andrews, that it is identical in all its interests. It consists of detached portions in and around the city, and is connected both historically and politically with the city and parish of St. Andrews.

Dunbead, a small village, is partly in this parish and that of Cameron; for names, see Cameron. Boarhills and Kincaple are also small villages, distant about 4 miles from and in the parish of St. Andrews.

UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS.

The University, which is the oldest in Scotland, was first founded in 1410 by Bishop Wardlaw, and in 1411 obtained a charter and endowments, soon after which, Benedict XIII. issued a papal bull in its favour.

The original colleges were St. Salvator, founded 1450; St. Leonards, founded 1512 and St. Mary's in 1537; of these, St. Salvator and St. Leonards were united into one college in 1747, by Act of Parliament, and in 1890, Dundee college was affiliated to the University.

The University Library, which contains 150,000 volumes, was founded in 1610, and occupies a building which has occasionally been used for sittings of the Scotch Parliament; of the old buildings of St. Salvator only the chapel and steeple remain, and of St. Leonards only the ruins of the chapel.

The United college occupies comparatively new buildings, and has a principal, with professors of Greek, logic, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, humanity, mathematics, natural history, anatomy and education. The college of St. Mary is an institution of less consequence, and consists of a principal and professors of divinity, biblical criticism, church history and Oriental languages.

The site of the Madras college is on the south side of South street, immediately behind and comprehending within it part of that fine old ruin of the Black Friars. The College, endowed by the late Dr. Bell, the distinguished founder of several similar establishments, both in this and in other towns in Scotland, cannot fail to secure to his memory, for ages to come, that veneration and esteem to which, as a benefactor of his race, he is so well entitled. The foundation stone was laid on the 9th April, 1832. Under the plan formulated by the Endowed Schools Commissioners for Scotland, this institution is now converted into a school for secondary education.

ST. LEONARDS, see ST. ANDREWS.

ST. MONANCE (or St. Monans) is a parish and a municipal burgh, 2 miles south-west of Pittenweem, 10 south of St. Andrews and 14 south-east from Cupar, having a small harbour on the Firth of Forth and a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section, of the North British railway. The parish extends 2½ miles from north to south by 1½ in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and is bounded north and north-east by Carnbee, east by Pittenweem and west by Kilconquhar. The burgh is governed by two bailies, a treasurer and twelve councillors. The principal employment of the inhabitants is fishing. The parish church stands on a hill above the village, and dates back to the 13th century. The ruins of Newark Castle are on an eminence near the church: this was at one time the seat of David Leslie, Lord Newark; he was a son of Patrick Leslie, of Pitcairlie, and, having served under Gustavus Adolphus, was chosen general of the Scottish forces sent to help the English Parliamentarians during the Civil war; having afterwards become a major-general on the king's side, he was opposed to Cromwell at Dunbar, and subsequently fought at Worcester; he received the title of Lord Newark at the Restoration; it is now extinct. Up to 1646 this parish was known as Abercrombie or Invernie, but has since been called by the name of its kirk. Sir R. W. Anstruther bart. D.L. of Balcuskie and W. Baird esq. of Elie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,203 acres; rateable value, £5,247; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,998, and of the burgh 1864, and in 1881, 2,054 and 1,918 respectively.

STRATHMIGLO is a burgh of barony and a parish in the north-western portion of the county, 2 miles south-west of Auchtermuchty, 3 north-west from Falkland and 8 north-east from Kinross; it has a station on the Mawcarse and Ladybank section of the North British railway. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 4 in breadth, and is bounded north by parts of Abernethy and Arngask, west and south-west by Kinross-shire, south-east by Falkland and north-east by Auchtermuchty; it is in the small debt court district of Auchtermuchty. The burgh is composed of two portions, Cashfeus and Strathmiglo, and consists chiefly of two streets, with several diverging lanes. The Town house stands about the centre of the principal street; it has a square steeple, at the top of which is a balcony surrounded by balustrades, the whole being surmounted by a spire nearly 80 feet high. From the front of the steeple projects a stone pillar which formerly served as a sun-dial, now much defaced; above this are the arms of the house of Burleigh. By charter in 1600 the detached portions of Feus were erected into a burgh of barony, and this grant was confirmed by James VI. in 1605, but the nomination of bailies and admittance of burgesses was vested in the person of the superior. On the opposite side of the Miglo is the village of the Feus of Cash, and between the old town and this village is a level meadow called Town green, intersected by the Miglo and belonging to the burgh. The principal trade is the manufacture of linen, and there is also a large bleach works. A fair is held at Strathmiglo on the last Friday in June. The Marquess of Bute, George Johnstone esq. and N. B. Skeine esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,024 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 1,753, including 1,099 in the burgh, and in 1881, 2061, including 1,283 in the burgh.

Gateside is a village in the parish of Strathmiglo, distant 2 miles west from the village; it has a station on the Mawcarse and Ladybank section of the North British railway, and contains a United Presbyterian church and a board school.

TAYPORT,

WITH THE PARISH OF FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG.

TAYPORT, known originally as South Ferry, then successively Ferry of Scotscraig and Ferry-port-on-Craig (a name now confined to the parish in which the town is situated), is a seaport town and police burgh on the Firth of Tay, opposite to Broughty Ferry, at about a mile distance by water, 11 miles north-by-east from Cupar, and 5 south-east from Dundee; it has a station on the St. Andrews, Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and is connected by a branch with the Tay bridge. For facilitating the shipping of goods, the railway company have constructed a dock and a pier, which can be approached by steamers at all times of the tide. There are three factories here for the spinning of yarns and the manufacture of linen and jute goods, also a foundry, engine works, and an extensive timber yard and works, which provide employment for many of the inhabitants. The North of Scotland Bank Limited has a branch here. The salmon fishery, which is co-extensive with the parish along the coast, is actively pursued during the season, the fish being mostly sent to the London markets; mussel dredging is also carried on extensively in the season. Tayport, with the parish, was originally an estate of the bishops of St. Andrews, and having in the reign of Alexander III. been feued to Sir Michael Scott, better known as "the Wizard," who is believed to have given it the name of Scotscraig; the town was made a police burgh in 1887, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. Many houses and villas have been erected on the slopes of the Tay, commanding a fine prospect of the opposite shore, Broughty Ferry and Dundee, and it has become to some extent a residential suburb of Dundee. The places of worship are the parish church, built in 1794 and re-built in 1825, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church and a Baptist chapel. There is also a Board school, erected to accommodate about 700 scholars.

Ferry-port-on-Craig is a parish in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, 5 small in length and from half a mile to a mile in breadth, stretching along the south margin of the Tay to its mouth, where it empties itself into the North Sea. The land rises to a hilly range extending westwards, and is bounded on the south by the parishes of Forgan and Leuchars, and on the north by the river Tay. The local position of the parish naturally accounts for its name, situated as it is on a rock or craig, and was formerly a ferry for the conveyance of passengers, horses and cattle, so that this was literally a ferry, whose port was on a craig (or craig)—hence the name; but now the steamers have long since abolished this mode of conveyance. It was erected into a separate parish in 1606, having up to that time formed part of Leuchars; part of Tents Muir forms the eastern portion of it; this district, at one time the residence of a wild tribe, is now a desolate sand waste. The estate of Scotscraig, which comprises the whole parish, was formerly the property of Archbishop Sharp, of St. Andrews, of whose house some remains can still be traced. The present mansion house was built in 1807, and is a substantial building amidst some fine plantations and well laid-out grounds, and is the property and residence of Mrs. Dougall. The area of the parish comprises 2,758 acres; rateable value, £10,445. The population of the parish in 1891 was 3,008, including 2,871 in the town, or 2,829 in the burgh, and in 1881, 2 818, including 2,630 in the town, or 2,605 in the burgh.

TORRYBURN is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles south-west of Dunfermline, and 17 south-west from Kirkcaldy. The parish extends for 5 miles along the Firth of Forth, and is about 1½ broad; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and is bounded north by Saline parish, west by Perthshire, and east by Inverkeithing and Dunfermline. The nearest railway stations are at Oakley and East Grange, on the Dunfermline, Alloa and Stirling section of the North British railway. The inhabitants at one time were chiefly employed in weaving,but this branch of industry has become extinct. From the rocky state of the shore it has been found impossible to form a harbour here; but a pier is situated at Crombie point, where steamers can land goods and passengers. The collieries of the Coltness Iron Co. Lim. situated at East Grange in this parish, find employment for most of the inhabitants. A fair is held at Torryburn on the second Wednesday in July. The parish, which is formed by the union of the baronies of Torry and Crombie, derives its name from the Gaelic word Torry, signifying the "King's Height," and burn, the Scottish term for rivulet. Within the boundary of the parish and adjacent to Torryburn village, is that of Low Torry. It is a very pretty village, having Torry Bay in front, with comparatively high back grounds protecting it from the north wind. Comrie Castle, the seat of Lady Maitland, is in this parish. Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. Archibald Dominic Smith Sligo esq. and Major Merindin are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 3,994 acres; rateable value, £6,869. The population in 1891 was 913, including 607 in the village, and in 1881, 737, including 427 in the village.

TULLIALLAN is a parish, formerly included as part of Perthshire, though locally situated in Fifeshire, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 13 December, 1890, and confirmed 23rd February, 1891; it is in the poor combination of Stirling and small debt court district of Dunfermline. It contains the town of Kincardine (or Kincardine-on-Forth), which see, and extends about 5 miles from north to south by 2 in breadth. It is bounded on the north and east by the parishes of Saline and Torryburn, and south and west by the river Forth and part of Clackmannanshire. The old church, which remains standing in the burial ground, is a ruin, the steeple, however, being perfect. Tulliallan Castle, the seat of the Marquess of Lansdowne, is a modern mansion close to the ruins of the old castle of that name. Lord Balfour of Burleigh and Laurence Johnston esq. of Sands, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,586 acres; rateable value, £6,700; the population in 1891 was 2,177, of whom 2,007 were in the town of Kincardine, and in 1881, 2,207, of whom 1,985 were in the town.

WEMYSS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF EAST AND WEST WEMYSS.

WEMYSS is a parish in the poor combination of Dysart, and (except West Wemyss, which is in the Kirkcaldy district) in the small debt court district of Leven; it contains the town of Buckhewen (which see), and the villages of Methil and East and West Wemyss; it derives its name from the Celtic word Wamb, signifying caves. The parish is bounded on the north by Kennoway and Markinch, on the south by the Firth of Forth, on the east by Scoonie, and on the west by Dysart; its length is 6 miles east to west, and a mile and a half in breadth. The minerals are ochre, ironstone and coal, the latter being very considerable and extensively wrought. A large portion of the Wemyss estate consists of coal seams of various depths, which have been increasingly wrought of late years, and a very large quantity of coal is yet unexcavated. In West Wemyss the coal trade has considerably increased, and several pits have been opened at Muiredge, besides a new pit sunk between the Castle and East Wemyss. There are four stations in this parish on the branch of the North British railway, which runs from Thornton Junction to Methil, and the Anstruther and St. Andrews line skirts the northern border of the parish. Within the parish is the ancient castle of Macduff, now a ruin. This massive structure crowns a height above the shore, to the east of East Wemyss, commanding a most extensive view seaward. Near Macduff's Castle are several extensive excavations at the base of the bank, which have evidently been formed by the action of the sea at a very remote period; one of these caves is called the "King's Cave," from the tradition that James V. in one of his frolics, joined an encampment of gipsies here. Some years ago Sir James Simpson discovered sculptorings on some of the walls of these caves of various animals and peculiar symbols, common on large stones in the north and east of Scotland, understood by archæologists to be of great antiquity. In a paper read before the Royal Society of Edinburgh he described these figures as met with in no other caves but those of Wemyss. The formation of the caves themselves is a result of the extraordinary force of the sea rolling in upon this part of the Fife coast from the German Ocean. The sea has washed with great force the high rocks at this point, but their soft material, consisting of the new red sandstone, admitted of that scooping out by the force of the tides which had formed the caves. One of them, immediately under Macduff's castle, is so narrow at the mouth that it is difficult to enter, but it expands so as easily to contain 100 persons. Another near is about fifty feet in height, and formed like a fine cupola. A third, still larger, between East and West Wemyss, termed the Glass cave, was used at the end of last century for the manufacture of glass from kelp formed from the seaweed. The land generally is in an excellent state of cultivation. A fair is held at Wemyss on the second Wednesday in September. This place gives a title to the Earl of Wemyss and March, the creations being Baron Wemyss, of Elcho, 1628, and Earl of Wemyss, 1633, in the peerage of Scotland, and Baron Wemyss, of the United Kingdom, 1821. Randolph Gordon Erskine-Wemyss esq. of Wemyss Castle, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 4,732 acres; rateable value, £64,577, which includes that of Buckhaven and Methil. The population in 1891 was 9,955, including 4,006 in Buckhaven, and in 1881, 7,307, including 2,952 in the town.

East Wemyss is a village in the parish of Wemyss, one mile north-east from West Wemyss, 5 north-east from Kirkcaldy, and 3 north-east from Dysart, situated on the Firth of Forth. In this village the manufacture of linen fabrics is carried on extensively, the factory of Messrs. G. & J. Johnston containing between two and three hundred power looms; a brewery and malting house are the other branches of business. There are Free and Established churches in the village; also public and Free Church schools. Population in 1891, 1,010, and in 1881, 846.

West Wemyss is a village, a mile west from East Wemyss, 4 north-east from Kirkcaldy, 5 south-west from Leven, and 2 north-east from Dysart; it is in the parish of Wemyss, and is a burgh of barony, governed by two bailies, twelve councillors and a treasurer. The harbour is situated at its western extremity, and has several vessels belonging to it employed in the exportation of coal, which is wrought close to the harbour. A short distance east of the village, on the brink or face of an eminence, and surrounded on the land side by beautiful plantations and pleasure grounds, is Wemyss Castle, the seat of Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. who is the sole proprietor of the parish, and the representative of the oldest family in the county. The Established church is the only place of worship. There is also a school here. Population in 1891, 1,300, and in 1881, 1,206.

FORFARSHIRE,

OR ANGUS,

A maritime county on the east coast, is bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the west and south-west by Perthshire, and the south, south-east and east by the Frith of Tay and North Sea, and on the north-east by Kincardineshire; its extent from north to south is about 38 miles, and from east to west 36, with 45 miles of coast line. The figure of this county is, perhaps, the most uniform of any in Scotland. The contents of its area have been variously estimated; it is stated to contain 875 square miles, or 560,186 acres; of these there are about 300,000 cultivated and 260,000 uncultivated; the portion occupied by the lakes is inconsiderable. In size Forfarshire is classed as the twelfth, and in population as the fifth of the Scottish counties. The population in 1891 being 125,412 males and 152,376 females; total 277,788, against 266,321 in 1881; the inhabited houses being 59,682 in 1891, and 52,681 in 1881.

Early History.—The district of Angus (now Forfarshire), with the contiguous county of Kincardine on the north, anciently formed the country of the "Horesti," and a portion of the Pictish kingdom. On the dissolution of that government by Kenneth II., about the end of the 9th century, he is said to have divided it between his two brothers, Angus and Mearns, from whom the two counties derived their appellation. The district gave the title of Earl to two different families; on the extinction of the first, the earldom was conferred on a relation of King David Bruce, and in 1477 it merged in the family of the Douglasses; it has since devolved on the Duke of Hamilton. There are a number of old ruinous castles in this county, most of which have fallen to decay, in consequence of the baronies on which they stand having passed into the hands of the proprietors of other estates. There are also remains of forts, the principal ones being at Castle-Finhaven, Dundee, Law, Monifieth, Dumbarrow and Caerbuddo.

Soil, Surface and Produce.—The great level valley of Strathmore runs through the centre of the county from east to west, and the lines of hills which flank this extensive and fine tract of country, with the Grampians on the north and some minor ranges on the south, may be said to form this district into a series of continuous ridges, generally pursuing a direction from west to east, interrupted occasionally by the different rivers and streams coursing to the sea. The eminences of greatest altitude in the shire are—Hill of Dundee, 525 feet; Dunnichen Hill, 720; Belmont, 759; Sidlaw, 1,406; Craigowl, 1,609; Oathlaw, one of the Grampians, 2,264; and Mount-Battock, 3,465 feet above the level of the sea. The portion of the Grampian mountains in this shire is diversified by many beautiful valleys, and from the summit of these elevations to the ocean on the east, and the Tay on the south, the surface of the land may be considered an inclined plane. From the aerial region of the highest Grampian an extensive and well varied prospect is presented, not only of almost the whole country adjoining the Tay and of the ocean, but of the eastern part of the peninsula of Fife, the coast of East Lothian, and the heights of Lammermoor. From the mouth of the Tay, to near the Westhaven, the coast is sandy, having, from thence eastward, many sunken rocks. Within a mile to the east of Arbroath the shore becomes bold and rocky, presenting precipices to the sea, perforated with caverns by the incessant and insidious workings of the waves; the "Redhead," a promontory upwards of 200 feet in perpendicular height, is the most striking feature of this rocky front; it forms the southern point of Lunan Bay, and exposes a beautiful beach to the ocean for nearly three miles. The capabilities of Forfarshire for agriculture continued for centuries in a dormant state, but it has now a practically enlightened system of farming. The farmers of this county have kept at least equal pace in the improvements adopted with those of similarly situated divisions of the country. The general drainage of the land has been proceeded with to a great and beneficial extent; and several lochs, particularly that of Rescobie, have been drawn off for the purpose of obtaining shell-marl, which has long been in high repute with the agriculturists, and the introduction of bone manure has been followed by the most gratifying results. The sowing of permanent pasture grasses and turnips is persevered in, and the quantity of ground appropriated to tillage is annually increasing. Wheat and beans are also grown, but only in the more favoured localities. The chief crops are oats, 51,534 acres; turnips, 35,482; barley, 28,527; potatoes, 12,386; wheat, 7,992; rye, 1,014; beans, 795, and hay (all kinds), 22,946 acres. The total corn crop being 89,908 and green crops 48,795; land under grass, 90,659 acres; total area of land and water, 562,162 acres. In traversing the lower parts of the shire, beautiful enclosures and plantations meet the eye, and excellent roads have been formed. The planting of waste lands seems to have made very little progress till about the middle of the last century, Scotch firs were the only sort of trees planted in such situations, but more recent planters introduced the larch as a valuable specie of timber, and adapted, as they thought, to every variety of soil and situation; but experience has proved that by the operation of draining the moors and waste lands produce excellent oak and beech, of which a number of proprietors have planted extensively. The improvement of live stock has been in proportionate advance with that of cultivation, and has been materially facilitated by the zealous co-operation of the various agricultural societies. The polled black Angus cattle, now less common than at one time, have given place to other breeds, and many young and lean cattle are imported from Ireland. Numbers of black-faced sheep are reared on the hills. The live stock comprised in 1894, 10,588 horses; 54,406 cattle; 148,993 sheep and 7,942 pigs. The fisheries of Forfarshire are of great importance, those of the North and South Esk, and the coast of the county, are at the present time very valuable; and the mode of packing salmon in ice, for the London market, is a practice which has proved of peculiar advantage to those connected with that branch of the fishery. Haddock, cod, ling, soles, halibut, turbot &c. are also caught, and during July and August the fishermen are engaged in fishing for herring, of which large numbers are taken off the north-east coast. The fishing boats registered in the county, under the Sea Fisheries Act,, 1868, were, in 1894, 151 boats with a tonnage of 1,228 tons and employing 279 hands, registered at Arbroath; 188 boats, 1,725 tons, 688 hands, at Dundee; and 289 boats, 4,126 tons, 862 hands (and 62 extra workers), at Montrose.

Manufactures and Minerals.—The manufactures of Forfar are of very high consequence; and as Fifeshire is celebrated for the production of the finer linen fabric, so is this county noted for the manufacture of the coarse hempen goods, wrought up from foreign materials; the spinning of yarn in large mills is carried on very extensively. Dundee, Arbroath and Montrose are its principal trading ports; the two first-named enjoy pre-eminence in the making of sailcloths, Osnaburgs, sacking, dowlases, and other linen textures; Brechin participates largely with other places in the preparation of flax; and the towns of Forfar, Montrose and Kirriemuir are seats of material manufacturing importance. Exclusive of these particular stations, the inhabitants of all the little towns and villages are industriously employed in weaving the already prepared materials into cloth, and in the process of bleaching. Besides the branches above mentioned, there are also many engineering works, breweries, tanneries, paper works, distilleries, and starch and tobacco manufactories. This county is not distinguished for its mineral treasures. Of limestone, which is found in various parts, there are immense tracts in the Grampians; but from the expense of conveying coal to burn it, this natural product, so valuable under other circumstances, is wrought but to a limited extent, and principally in the neighbourhood of Montrose. Freestone is plentiful in almost every parish; the colour is various, but in no instance so white and beautiful as the stone of Fife or Mid-Lothian. The Arbroath paving stone is well known, and has a ready sale in London and Edinburgh. Lead has been found in several places, and was at one time wrought to a limited extent in the parish of Lochlee. But, unfortunately, this county is destitute of coal— at least no vestige of it has yet been discovered; the whole district, therefore, is dependent on the Fife and Newcastle collieries for a supply of fuel. Borings have at different times been made, but without success.

Rivers, Lochs and Railways.—The principal rivers are the North and South Esk, which rise near each other on the northern confines of the county, in the Braes of Angus; the first-named being formed by the Mark and the Lee (which latter river runs through Loch Lee), receiving the Tarf, Westwater, Cruick and Luther, and debouching into the North Sea 3 miles north of Montrose. The South Esk rises on the north-west border, and, passing south-east nearly through the centre of the county, is fed by the Norah, Lemno, Carity and Prosen, and reaches the sea at Montrose; there is a third river of some size, the Isla, which rises near the west border and flowing south-east receives the Dean, Carleet and Glamis, and turning west near Alyth, joins the Tay at Kinclaven. There are also two lesser rivers, the Dighty and the Lunan. The former proceeds from some small lakes in the parish of Lundie, and falls into the mouth of the Tay, east from Broughty Ferry; the latter conveys the waters of the lakes of Rescobie and Belgavies to the sea at Lunan Bay. The Lunan is famous for its eels, and the other rivers abound with different varieties of the trout and salmon. The Tay skirts the southern portion, and is the great cause of the commercial prosperity of Dundee; it rises in the western part of Perthshire, a little east of Perth city it becomes an estuary or firth, and about 8 miles below Dundee it expands into the bay of St. Andrews, in which is placed the Bell Rock light. The lakes of most consequence are Loch Lee, in the parish of its name; Loch Brandy, in the parish of Clova; the Loch of Forfar, near that town; the Lochs of Rescobie and Lintrathen, in the respective parishes so denominated; and of Belgavies, in the parish of Aberlemno. None of these are of great magnitude—indeed few, if any, are more than a mile in extent. The railways are confined to the southern and eastern portion of the county, where they connect the different towns with Aberdeen on the north and Edinburgh and Glasgow on the south. These lines are chiefly part of the Caledonian Railway system, the main line of which enters the county a little east of Cupar Angus, and at Alyth Junction, south of Ruthven, it sends a branch to the north-west to Alyth and one south-east-by-south to Dundee, the main line proceeding on to Forfar, where a line from Dundee, via Broughty Ferry, comes in on the south, thence to Guthrie, whence a branch goes south-east to Arbroath; the next junction is at Dubton, where the Montrose line joins, after which the Caledonian leaves the county, near Craigo; the North British enters at Broughty Ferry, whence the line which belongs to the Caledonian from Dundee becomes joint property as far as Arbroath, and from thence the North British passes through Lunan Bay to Montrose, and on to Marykirk and Aberdeen.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Forfarshire comprises 50 complete parishes and five parts of parishes, in which are five royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, Brechin and Forfar; the four last-named burghs, with Bervie (in Kincardineshire), unite in sending one member to Parliament. Dundee, raised to the dignity of a city by royal charter, returns two, and the county one; the parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 was 12,010. The valuation of the county for 1894-95 was £502,868; railways, £60,365; waterworks, £27,697; total, £590,930.

ABERLEMNO is a parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Forfar, with a hamlet of the same name, 5 miles north-east from Forfar and 6 south-west from Brechin, the nearest railway station being Aldbar, on the Caledonian railway, 3½ miles south, near the boundary of the parish. The parish is about 5 miles from north to south by 4 miles wide, and bounded on the north-east and east by the parish of Brechin, Guthrie on the south-east, Rescobie on the south-west, Oathlaw on the west, Tannadice on the north-west and Careston on the north. The river South Esk flows along the north boundary. There is an Established church, a good stone building, also a Free church and two Board schools. A quarry in the parish yields good flagstones and slates, which are sent by rail to various towns, and a considerable number of the inhabitants are employed in it, the remainder being employed in agriculture. Turin Hill, the highest elevation in the parish, is 800 feet above sea level. In the parish churchyard is an antique obelisk, covered with hieroglyphics, and also a little to the north of the parish church are three antique obelisks, two of which are also covered by hieroglyphics, which are supposed to have been erected to commemorate a signal victory obtained over the Danes near this place. Antiquarians, however, are not agreed as to the design for which they were erected. A little to the eastward of the church are the ruins of the Castle of Flemington, and about 2 miles north-east from the church are also the ruins of Melgund Castle, which is supposed to have been erected by Cardinal Beaton. The "vitrified Fort of Finhaven" is about a mile west from the parish church. The Earl of Minto is the lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 8,914 acres; rateable value, £7,805; the population in 1891 was 477 males and 449 females, total 926, against 993 in 1881.

Post Office; Andrew Davidson, postmaster. Delivery, 10.45 a.m.; dispatch, 12.10 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Forfar & the nearest telegraph office at Aldbar station. Letters should be addressed "near Forfar"

AIRLIE (formerly Airly) is a parish with its kirktown, about 6 miles west from Kirriemuir, situated in the western part of the county, on the borders of Perthshire, in the small debt court district of Kirriemuir; its length from north-east to south-by-west is about 6 miles, with a breadth varying from a half to 4 miles, bounded on the north by Lintrathen and Kingoldrum, on the east by Kirriemuir and Glamis, on the south by Eassie and Meigle and on the west by Glenisla and Ruthven; part of the line of boundary is formed by the river Isla and its tributaries, the Meigle and Dean. The nearest railway stations are Eassie and Glamis, on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway; they are each about 4 miles south-west and south-east respectively from Airlie kirktown. Within the parish is situated Airlie Castle, the ancient seat of the Ogilvies, earls of Airlie, and now much frequented in the summer months by visitors. Small portions only of the ancient structure are preserved, these being the front wall and entrance tower, the arch of which still retains its portcullis; these are incorporated in the modern mansion of Airlie, a seat of the Earl of Airlie. Lindertis is the residence of Sir Thomas Munro bart. D.L., J.P. who is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 8,923 acres; rateable value, £8,864; the population in 1891 was 741, against 844 in 1881.

ALYTH PARISH and TOWN. See PERTHSHIRE.

ARBIRLOT is a parish and village, the former bounded on the east by the German Ocean, north by Arbroath and St. Vigeans, west by Carmyllie and south by Panbride parishes; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath and extends 4 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth. The main line of the Dundee and Dubton section Joint Caledonian and North British railway runs along the coast and has a station 2 miles east of the church, called Elliot Junction. The village, which is 3 miles west of Arbroath and 14 north-east from Dundee, is on the east bank of the Elliot burn, from which the old name of the parish (Aberelliot) was derived. A cattle fair is held on the second Wednesday in November. About a quarter of a mile south-east of the village stands Kelly Castle, which originally belonged to the family of Ouchterlony and now to the Earl of Dalhousie; it is at present tenanted by Percy Blakelock esq. The surface of the land is flat and along the sea coast the soil is sandy; inland it is a rich loam, capable of producing various crops. The trustees of the late Earl of Dalhousie are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,747 acres; rateable value, £11,068; the population in 1891 was 848, against 822 in 1881.

Post Office; William Craig, postmaster. Letters through Arbroath. Delivery, 8 a.m. & dispatch at 2 p.m. Nearest money order & telegraph office is at Arbroath, 3 miles distant

ARBROATH,

WITH THE JOINT PARISH OF ST. VIGEANS AND VILLAGE OF MARYWELL.

ARBROATH is a royal burgh, a seaport and the seat of a presbytery, 60 miles north-north-east from Edinburgh, 110 north-east from Glasgow, 17 north-east from Dundee, 15 south-east from Forfar and 12 south from Montrose, situated on a small plain on the coast of the German Ocean, in the joint parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans, on both sides of the river Brothock where it flows into the sea. It has a station, which is a junction for the Dundee, Arbroath and Forfar Joint railway of the Caledonian and North British lines with the Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway. There is a large harbour, upon which considerable improvements have been made, the principal being the conversion of the inner harbour into a wet dock. For these works a loan of £20,000 was obtained, but much more than that sum was expended. As a result of this improvement, steamers of a fairly large size frequent the port, but for some years the trade has been in a somewhat backward condition. At the commencement of the 18th century, Arbroath had but little trade, nor did it claim any notice as a place of manufacture. Nothing was then directly imported, except a small cargo of wood occasionally from Norway; flax, iron and other useful commodities were purchased from the merchants in Dundee and Montrose. About the year 1738, the manufacture of coarse linens was introduced by the following accident:—A weaver in the town having a small quantity of flax unfit for the kind of cloth then usually brought to market, made it into a web and offered it to another of the inhabitants at a price by which he was willing to be the loser; the purchaser, who had previously been in Germany, remarked a similarity between this piece of cloth and the manufacture of Osnaburgh, and prevailed upon the weaver to make a trial of other webs of the same texture; the experiment succeeded—a company was established, and other parts of the county soon availed themselves of the discovery. The staple trade of Arbroath at the present day is the manufacture of sail cloth and other coarse linens; the preparation and spinning of the yarns of these productions of the loom is carried on extensively by many firms and individuals. Jute spinning has also been introduced, but is of small extent compared with flax spinning. In addition to the linen trade there are various concerns of magnitude, including engineering works, iron foundries, a tannery, large and flourishing boot and shoe manufactories, roperies &c. and a good trade exists in the exportation of grain and potatoes. There are five branches of banks established here, viz., the British Linen Company, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland, all accommodated in handsome buildings; there is also a bank for savings. This is a town of early origin; previously existing as a village, it was gifted to the abbey of Aberbrothock (founded here by William the Lion), and the abbey was erected into a burgh of regality and received a charter as a royal burgh in 1599. The remains of the abbey (founded 1178) are strikingly picturesque; the south gable of the transepts, the north-west tower, about 70 feet high, portions of the chapter house and west door and the gate house, with its crow-stepped gable, still remain; the style is Early English and Transitional and has some remarkable arcading in the lower stories. A part of the abbot's lodgings still remains. In this house King Robert the Bruce was frequently entertained by the abbot, who was also Chancellor of Scotland. The monks first came from Kelso, and Reginald (a monk of Tyron) was first abbot. The abbey was very extensively endowed with lands and other gifts by Kings William I., Alexander II. and Robert I. and their nobility. It possessed 46 parish churches, and extensive lands in several counties, particularly in the north of Scotland, with privileges of regality &c. The abbots of this foundation had privileges which others did not enjoy—they were exempt from assisting at the yearly synods, and had the distinction of making use of and wearing the pontifical ornaments. King John conferred on the inhabitants of the place the same privileges that his subjects enjoyed throughout all England, except in his city of London.

Arbroath is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 12 councillors. There is a guildry and a body of seven incorporated trades, but these are now virtually private bodies. This town unites with Forfar, Montrose, Brechin and Bervie in sending one member to the Imperial Parliament. Arbroath is the seat of a sheriff court for the district. The court sits weekly, on Wednesday, during session. Police courts are also held weekly, or oftener when necessary, and burgh and justice of peace courts are also held. The parish of Arbroath is now a joint parish with St. Vigeans for administrative purposes, by Order which took effect from the 15th July, 1895; they are in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. There are many well built streets, the principal business streets being High street, Keptie street and West port. The town has been greatly improved by paving and sewerage, and by the addition of elegantly fitted and well supplied shops, and possesses several good hotels, the principal being the White Hart, two news rooms and a Public library. A large public hall, with subsidiary rooms, in High street, was erected in 1866 by an incorporated company; and the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans have also erected a combination poorhouse in an elevated and healthy suburb of the town. In 1812 a town house was built, and in 1855, at the rear of it, commodious market buildings were erected by the magistrates and town council, at an outlay of about £7,000. The market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the last Saturday in January for general business and hiring servants; on the 28th May, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring; July 18th (if it fall on a Saturday, if not, on the following Saturday) for general business and hiring; and 28th November, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring. Two newspapers are published in the town, the "Arbroath Guide" (every Saturday) and the "Arbroath Herald" (every Thursday).

Arbroath is the seat of a presbytery (No. 52), which meets on first Tuesday of February, April, May, July, September and December: it has, with the joint parish of St. Vigeans, seven Established places of worship, five Free churches, one Episcopalian church, three United Presbyterian, one Baptist, one Congregational, one Evangelical Union, one Methodist chapel, one Original Secession church, one Roman Catholic church and one Catholic Apostolic. The parish church (with the exception of the steeple) was totally destroyed by fire in November, 1892, and is now (1895) in course of rebuilding, from designs by John James Burnet esq. A.R.S.A. of Glasgow; the style is Early Pointed Gothic; towards the cost, estimated at £8,000, the Baird Trust has made a grant of £1,500: the steeple, built in 1832, forms a portion of the new church; it is 150 feet in height: the new church will probably be opened at the end of the present year (1895): a three light east window has been presented by the family to the memory of John Macdonald esq. town clerk and his wife, at a cost of over £1,000: the pulpit, in oak, of Gothic design, is a present from the Young Men's Guild. There are several public educational establishments, including the Arbroath High school and large public schools erected by the Burgh School Board. A new High school, built in 1895, in Keptie road, at the west end of the town, on seven acres of ground fued from the Hospitalfield Trustees, was erected at a cost of £12,000, from plans prepared by Messrs. Carver and Symon, Arbroath, the style adopted being a modified Elizabethan: the building is of two storeys and contains 18 class rooms, also two music rooms, five teachers' rooms, lavatories &c.: the school is for the teaching of secondary education, but there is an elementary department for children till they have passed Standard III. also a science and art school. There are endowments of £75, payable by the town; £120 by the Arbroath Educational Trust; £170 payable by the Morgan Trust, Dundee, and the County Committee grant of £300 for secondary education: there are about 60 free scholarships for children from Arbroath and the neighbouring parishes: the school is in charge of a rector: it will be opened in the year 1896. The educational endowments are administered by the Arbroath Educational Trust, according to a scheme prepared by the Educational Endowment Commissioners.

The local charities of the town include the Infirmary and Dispensary (with Epidemic Hospital adjacent), a stone building at High Common, and two destitute sick societies; also a number of mortifications, viz.: Carmichael's, founded 1738, out of which the widows of seven ship masters get a division half-yearly; Colvill's, founded 1812, out of which £60 annually is expended on the education of ten poor children; £10 to the Scotch Episcopal clergymen; £10 to the poor of Arbroath; the like sum to the poor of St. Vigeans, and the residue to 20 poor householders; Dove's, founded in 1841, for the education of "native born boys," of poor parentage; Mrs. Renny Strachan's, which amounts to £50 yearly, to be expended in purchasing coals and oatmeal for distribution at Christmas amongst the most necessitous poor; Forbes's Fund, founded 1864, from which sums of not less than £8 nor more than £10 yearly are given for the relief of destitute widows and old unmarried females in the town of Arbroath; Gibson Fund, founded 1868; annual produce of residue of trust estate of the late William Gibson, applied as follows:—£100 to the rector of the High school for the education of eight boys, and the remainder divided yearly in sums of not less than £20 and not more than £25 among poor householders of the town of Arbroath, preference being given to respectable worthy people of fallen fortunes; Gibson Christmas Charity, 1868, annual revenue of the sum of £2,000, applied one-half in purchase of coals, other half in groceries, oatmeal and clothes for distribution among the necessitous poor of the town; Gibson Mortification, 1868, annual revenue of a sum of £4,000, divided yearly among 16 poor householders of the town; a fund supposed to amount to about £2,000, bequeathed in 1875, by Mr. William Petrie, manufacturer, to be distributed in £10 shares among "poor, deserving women of respectable character, being in and belonging to, and at the time resident in the parish of St. Vigeans, and who have not been in receipt of parochial relief for the preceding five years at least;" Duncan Charity, 1869, annual profits of three-eighths of residue of the estates of the late David Duncan, for behoof of poor, aged and reduced persons, not being objects of parochial relief; Arbikie Fund, bequeathed by John Mudie, of Pitmures, being the personal estate of his sister, the late Miss Catherine Mudie, of Arbikie, to which he had succeeded, the free revenue being divided into annuities of £40 each, among deserving persons residing in the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans; and Arrott's Mortification, bequeathed by the late Dr. James Arrott, of Dundee, the capital sum amounting to about £6,000, and the free revenue, being annually distributed in annuities of about £6 each.

The land in the neighbourhood of Arbroath slopes gradually upwards from the shore; the surrounding country is agricultural and for the most part very fertile, the soil, though varied, being excellently adapted for all the different grain and green crops usually grown in Scotland. About a mile north-east, but locally in the parish of St. Vigeans, the coast becomes very bold, rocky and perpendicular, and comprise a number of caves and arches perforated by the action of the waves; these are a great attraction to visitors, having been rendered famous by Sir Walter Scott in his "Antiquary." Near the harbour at Lady Loan is a signal tower for communication with the Bell (or Inch Cape) Rock, which rises from the German Ocean, about 12 miles in a south-easterly direction from Arbroath. Of this rock, and the tradition attached to it, a most entertaining account will be found in Chambers' "Gazetteer," and other works. On "the rock" is a lighthouse, the first stone of which was laid in July, 1808, and the beacon first loomed over the deep on the 1st of February, 1811: at the lighthouse there are a principal lightkeeper and three assistants: at the signal tower, on shore, each keeper has apartments for his family; the tower is about 80 feet in height and is furnished with an excellent telescope. Signals are arranged with the persons at the lighthouse on the rock by the lightkeeper on shore daily at nine morning, weather permitting: there is an attendant vessel from Arbroath engaged to and fro in the summer time in charge of a master, but in winter the communication is by steamer from Granton. Hospitalfield, the mansion of the late Patrick Alan Fraser esq. H.R.S.A. contains many art treasures, and is open to the public once a week during the summer months; it was the Monkbarns of the "Antiquary." The trustees of the late Patrick Alan Fraser esq. of Hospitalfield, and John Jamieson esq. of Denfield, are the principal landowners of Arbroath parish; and Fitzroy Charles Fletcher esq. of Letham, Sir Leonard Lyell bart. of Kinnordy, the Hon. Frederick John Bruce, of Seaton, John Duncan esq. of ParKhill, and F. F. Macdonald esq. of Lochlands, for St. Vigeans. The rateable value of the burgh (parliamentary and royal) is £86,931, and the population in 1891 was 22,987, against 21,758 in 1881; the area of the parish of Arbroath, including the burgh, is 943 acres, with a population of 9,657; the rateable value of the part outside the burgh is £1,396, wih a population of 187. The area of the parish of St. Vigeans, including the burgh, is 12,731 acres, with a population of 15,712; the rateable value of the part outside the burgh is £20,547, with a population of 2,361.

St. Vigeans is a parish, 8 miles from east to west by 4 in depth, lying north of that of Arbroath, with which, by an Order dated 28 May, 1895, it is incorporated for administrative purposes, and contains the villages of St. Vigeans and Marywell and half the town of Arbroath; it is bounded on the north and north-east by the parish of Inverkeilor and south-west by Carmyllie, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. It has an Established church, dating back to the 12th century, and school, and the Arbroath railway station is in this parish. It was itself anciently termed Aberbrothock; the name by which it is now known is that of a famous hermit who had his chapel and hermitage at the Grange of Conan, near to which was a baronial castle, named Gory, or Gregory. From Whiting Ness, and as far as Auchmithie, the coast is very rugged and precipitous (gradually rising to Dickmontlaw Hill, 250 feet above the sea level), containing a number of caves and arches, some of which may be passed through in boats and others on foot; they are a great attraction, and much visited. The stream of the Brothock flows through the parish and passes through the town of Arbroath, entering the sea at its harbour. Marywell is a small village in this parish. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans is 4,103 and 1,299 respectively, and the following quoad sacra parishes have been formed out of the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans: Ladyloan, population 4,662; Abbey, 5,737; Inverbrothock, 5,383; St. Margarets, 3,123; Colliston, 575, and Auchmithie, 487. Letham Grange, in the parish of St. Vigeans, the residence of Fitzroy Charles Fletcher esq. is a large mansion in the Grecian style, situated about 3 miles north from Arbroath.

AUCHMITHIE, a quoad sacra parish formed from that of St. Vigeans, contains a village of the same name, situated on the shore of a small harbour for fishing boats, on the east coast, about 3½ miles north from Arbroath, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. The harbour, towards the construction of which the Fishery Board of Edinburgh made a grant of £3,900, cost in all £5,200. The coast here consists of bold rocky cliffs. Arbroath and Letham Grange, on the North British Coast line from Arbroath to Montrose, are the nearest railway stations, and are distant 3 miles south and west respectively. The Earl of Northesk is the principal landowner. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 487.

Post Office; Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, postmistress. Letters through Arbroath. Dispatch, 2 p.m. Nearest money order & telegraph office, Arbroath, 3½ miles distant AUCHTERHOUSE, a parish in the south of the county, to the south of the Sidlaw Hills, with its kirktown 7 miles north-west of Dundee, is bounded north by Glamis, east and south-east by Tealing, Strathmartine and Liff, west and south-west by Newtyle and Lundie; it is in the Dundee small debt court district, and has a station on the Dundee and Alyth branch of the Caledonian railway. The road from Dundee to Meigle passes through the parish, which has an Established church, built in 1775, and a school. The soil is chiefly sandstone. The Earl of Airlie, the Earl of Camperdown and D. S. Cowans esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,708 acres; rateable value, £10,454; population in 1891, 532; in 1881, 633.

Post Office; Mrs. Jane Christie, sub-postmistress. Letters through Dundee. Delivery, 8.40 a.m.; dispatch, 2.25 p.m. Newtyle is the nearest money order & telegraph office. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid

BARNHILL, see BROUGHTY FERRY.

BARRY (or Barrie) is a parish, about 4 miles from north to south by 3½, in the south-east angle of the county, and at the mouth of the Tay, which bounds it on the south, the eastern boundary being the North Sea, and the western Monifieth; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, and contains the village and kirktown of Barry and two-thirds of the burgh of Carnoustie, at which town and at Barry are stations on the Dundee and Arbroath branch of the North British railway. The village is 9 miles north-east from Dundee and 8 south-west from Arbroath, and contains an Established church, Free church and school. The soil is sandy and the country undulating. The trustees of the late Earl of Dalhousie, of James Walker, of Ravensby, and of Mrs. Lingard Guthrie, of Carnoustie, and William Wighton esq. of the Grange, Barry, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,328 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £6,385; the population in 1891 was 3,787, including 3,225 persons in the burgh of Carnoustie; in 1881 the figures were 3,233 and 2,728. In 1892 the Government acquired, at a cost of £48,000, the extensive links in this parish as a training ground for military purposes; its artillery range is one of the best land ranges in Britain, and the ground is otherwise very suitable for manœuvres, rifle practice and encamping, it being easy of access by rail and water. At Buddonness, on the southern extremity of the parish, are two lighthouses, and close by is a lightship to guide vessels on their entrance into the Tay.

Sub-Post Office (Barry village); John Scott, postmaster. Letters through Carnoustie R.S.O. (Forfarshire). Deliveries, 7.25 a.m. & 5 p.m.; dispatched, 1.30 & 5.15 p.m. Nearest money order & telegraph office is at Carnoustie

BRECHIN.

BRECHIN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery and the seat of a bishop, and the head of a poor combination and small debt court district, 11 miles north-east from Forfar and 70 north-by-east from Edinburgh, situated on the north bank of the South Esk, with a station on a branch line of the north-eastern section of the Caledonian railway; a line has been made by the same company to connect this town with Forfar. Brechin more than once suffered by the incursions of invaders and broils of civil wars; it was burnt by the Danes in 1012, and in 1645 was subjected to a similar calamity by the Marquis of Montrose; two years afterwards it was nearly depopulated by that dreadful scourge, the plague. Formerly the city was walled, but the walls and gates have been long removed. An interesting fragment remains of the hospital of Maison Dieu, founded by William Brechin in 1264. Between the town and the river, and only separated from the former by a ravine, stands Brechin Castle, an ancient seat of the Maules of Panmure, now represented by the Earl of Dalhousie; it is built on a precipitous rock overhanging the stream: it sustained a siege of 20 days in 1303 from the English army under Edward I. but Sir Thomas Maule, its commander, being killed, it surrendered: the south front, towards the river, consists of some remains of the original structure, with some more recent erections, including a square tower: the west front is formed with regularity, in the style of the 17th century, with round towers at the angles. This town has given birth to more men of genius and literary distinction than any place, in proportion to its size, in Scotland, among whom may be enumerated Maitland, the laborious historian of Edinburgh and London; Dr. Gillies, the historian of Greece; his brother, Lord Adam Gillies, Dr. Thomas Guthrie and Colvin Smith, the eminent artist, to whom Sir Walter Scott sat on five different occasions, and numerous others. The antiquity of Brechin as a royal burgh is of remote date; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, hospital master and seven councillors, who are also police commissioners. The burgh joins with Forfar, Montrose, Arbroath and Inverbervie in returning one member to Parliament. A burgh or bailie court is held every Wednesday, and oftener when necessary; the magistrates are the judges: a justice of peace court is held on the first Wednesday in every month, and a sheriff court on the third Tuesday of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last-mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims.

The cathedral of Brechin was one of the few places of worship in which the service of the liturgy was for some time performed without interruption after its promulgation in 1637: the bishop was a man of singularly strong and daring character, and ascended the pulpit with a pair of pistols under his gown, determined to carry the behests of royalty into execution at whatever risk. The see of Brechin was founded in 1150, by David I., who also richly endowed it, and the cathedral church of the Holy Trinity, erected in the 13th century, originally consisted of an aisleless choir of uncertain length and a clerestoried nave of five bays with narrow aisles; the transepts, removed in 1806, do not appear to have formed part of the original plan, but to have been a later addition, and were small and of no great height: the north-west tower, with its projecting embattled parapet, turret and octagonal spire, dates from about the middle of the 15th century; the height to the top of the spire is nearly 130 feet, and there are 3 bells: the ruined choir now comprises portions only of the north and south walls, including a number of Early English windows, with clustered shafts and dog-tooth mouldings, and on the floor lies a fragment of a Celtic tomb slab: in 1806 the church was to a large extent rebuilt in a very debased style, and greatly injured, the aisles being widened and raised so as to destroy the clerestory, galleries carried round the whole interior, and the east and west piers much injured by the erection of stone stairs: the west end of the south aisle now abuts on a fine round tower of the 11th century, 87 feet in height, and tapering slightly towards the top, and finished with a corbelled cornice and octagonal spire; the circular-headed entrance is about 6 feet from the ground, and has over it a figure of the "Crucifixion," and on either side rude carvings of bishops: the west doorway, recessed in six orders, is of the same period as the choir, the window over it displays rich flowing Decorated tracery: the extreme length of the church, excluding the bell tower, is 94 feet; originally, with the choir, it was about 180 feet: the communion plate is of beaten silver. The other places of worship include another Established church (East parish), two Free, three United Presbyterian, one Episcopal and one Roman Catholic, and chapels for the Evangelical Union and Plymouth Brethren.

In recent years the city has been much improved and modernized, and there are at present (1896) two new public buildings, one in Bank street for municipal offices, including court room, council chamber &c. the other, in Panmure street, for the business of the Post Office. Flax spinning and the manufacture of linen and a paper mill employ numerous hands; there are also two distilleries and a brewery. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, British Linen Co. Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, are established here. A newspaper, entitled the "Brechin Advertiser," established in 1848, is published on Tuesday morning. The principal hotels are the Commercial, the Dalhousie and the Crown. The Mechanics' Institution contains an excellent library, reading room and billiard club, and is in the Tudor style, with castellated parapet with pinnacles; a fine tower rises in the centre to the height of 80 feet, from the summit of which there is a fine prospect: the building was erected at the sole cost of the late Lord Panmure, who also presented to the institution numerous valuable paintings; he also gave £1,000 to be vested at interest, which yields about £40 a year, and is appropriated to enriching the library with books and the support of courses of lectures, and the subscribers are entitled to the benefit of the whole for a very small payment annually. By the gift of an anonymous donor of £5,000, a Public Library has been erected near the Railway station. A building for the Young Men's Christian Association has been erected in Bank street, at a cost of £1,500, and was opened in 1878, the money being raised by public subscriptions. Also in the same year the Poorhouse for 100 inmates was erected, at a cost of £3,000, in Infirmary street: the Infirmary, close by, is a substantial-looking building of stone, built in 1869, for 33 patients. The beautifully-kept cemetery is approached from Panmure street. Trinity Muir, one mile north of the town, besides being the site of a fair, is resorted to by cricket and golf players during the summer. A public park, off Park road, was opened in 1887, and in front of it, on a site known as St. Ninian's square, very tasteful gardens and walks have been laid out. Fairs are held on the 2nd Thursday in June for cattle, on the 2nd Friday in June for horses and on the Tuesday after the 2nd Thursday in July for wool; hiring market on 1st Tuesday after 28th May and on Nov. 28th and last Tuesday in January for married ploughmen, which is called the "Carlie Market." The weekly market is held on Tuesday, and a local company conducts weekly a large sale of cattle &c. The area of the parish comprises 14,313 acres; rateable value, £66,044, and had in 1891 a population of 10,453, of which 8,955 persons were in the burgh, and in 1881 the figures were 10,499 and 9,031.

BROUGHTY-FERRY.

BROUGHTY-FERRY is a considerable modern town and police burgh, seated on the Firth of Tay, with a station on the Dundee and Arbroath railway, about 4 miles east from Dundee, nearly opposite to Ferry-Port-on-Craig, or Tayport. The place takes its name from the old castle of Broughty or "Burgh Tay" (the defence of the Tay), situated on its south-eastern extremity, on a rocky eminence jutting into the water; the castle, formerly in ruins, has been made into a formidable defence for the mouth of the Tay. Broughty is divided into two districts, East Ferry and West Ferry—the former is in the parish of Monifieth, and the latter in that of Dundee; it is regularly built, and has improved very considerably during the last few years, having become the place of residence of many of the principal bankers and merchants of Dundee. The town is governed by commissioners of police and police magistrates, under the provisions of the Police Act of 1862. At one time the East Ferry comprised only a few fishermen's huts, built along the beach, but now the population is considerable, while persons from various parts of the country visit it during the summer months to enjoy its pleasant scenery, pure air and bathing. The pier and harbour were constructed in 1871 at a cost of about £3,800, projecting in the river about 200 feet due south, with a width of 30 feet; at the outer end of the pier is a wooden platform and slip, supported on piles, forming an angle running eastward in the direction of the North British railway pier, which gives it a semi-dock like appearance, and providing berthage for four or five small vessels: the slip is of a uniform breadth of 20 feet, running from the top of the pier down to low water, partly under the platform at a gentle declination; this arrangement will accommodate vessels at low water, and the landing and embarking of passengers from small steamers at any state of tide. Storehouse, office, and steelyard have also been added. About half a mile to the north of Broughty-Ferry is Fort-hill, or Hill of Balgillo, on which fortifications were erected by the English in 1548, during the reign of Henry VIII. and regency of the Earl of Arran, when they ravaged Dundee and the surrounding country; in 1550 the works on this hill, being surrendered to an allied army of Scots, Germans and French, under M. Des Thermies, were dismantled, and at the present day they present merely scattered remains. There are ten places of worship—two Established, three Free, two United Presbyterian, one Episcopal, one Independent and one Baptist. The East Free church, built in 1865, is a handsome Gothic structure. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, and a Savings Bank, are established here. There are two public halls. The "Broughty-Ferry Guide" newspaper is published every Friday. The principal seats are Forbes Court, the residence of the Right Rev. Hugh Willoughby Jermyn D.D. (Bishop of Brechin); Carbet Castle, the residence of Mrs. Grimond; Castleroy, the residence of Mrs. S. Gilroy; Balgillo, the residence of John C. Buist esq. and Dunalestair, the residence of Mrs. M. Gilroy. The population of the town in 1891 was 9,256, and in 1881, 7,923.

Barnhill, one mile east from Broughty-Ferry, in Monifieth parish, and now included in that burgh, is a station on the Dundee and Forfar direct line, which has facilitated the opening out of this locality, and has now become a favourite place of residence. Here is a Convalescent Home in connection with the Dundee Royal Infirmary, erected in 1876 from funds left by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and opened in March, 1877. There is a cemetery five acres in extent.

CARESTON is a small parish about 2 miles by 1½, situated between the parishes of Brechin and Tannadice, 4 miles south-west of Brechin town, on the north bank of the South Esk; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Menmuir and Fearn parishes respectively, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin. There is a station in the village on the line from Brechin to Forfar, on the Caledonian railway. The land is composed of beautiful and well cultivated braes, sloping to the south. The castle of Careston, erected about the year 1400, of which William Shaw Adamson esq. J.P. is the proprietor, was formerly one of the residences of the Earls of Crawford: above the mantelpiece, in what is called the old drawing room, are the royal arms of Scotland, under which is an inscription, the first earl (1398) having married King Robert II.'s eldest daughter. William Shaw Adamson esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 2,085 acres; rateable value, £2,226; the population in 1891 was 198, and in 1881, 194.

Post Office; Andrew Gardiner, postmaster. Delivery to callers; letters arrive at 9.50 a.m. & are dispatched at 10 a.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Brechin CARMYLLIE is a parish 3 miles from north to south by 5 in breadth, and bounded by parts of eight parishes, viz.: Panbride, Monikie, Guthrie, Dunnichen, Kirkden, Inverkeilor, St. Vigeans and Arbirlot. The village of Carmyllie is about 5 miles south from Friockheim and about 7 west from Arbroath, in which small debt court district it is situated. The nearest railway stations are Friockheim, 5 miles north, on the Arbroath and Forfar section of the Caledonian line, and Elliot Junction, 4 miles east, on the Dundee and Arbroath section of North British. The river Elliot runs through the parish, and the surface is hilly with a fairly productive soil, and near are some large quarries of paving stone. A cattle fair is held on the last Tuesday in April. The Earl of Dalhousie, Col. Thomas Heathcote Ochterlony J.P. of Guynd, and the representatives of John Ewan, of Covonsyth, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,553 acres; rateable value, £7,938; the population in 1891 was 1,083, and in 1881, 1,137.

Sub-Post Office, Redford; Alexander Boath, postmaster. Letters through Arbroath. Delivery, 9.30 a.m.; dispatch, 12.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office & savings bank is at Friockheim, 4½ miles distant CARNOUSTIE is a thriving town on the North Sea and a police burgh, two-thirds of which are within the parish of Barry and the remainder, known as Newton and Westhaven portions, in the parish of Panbride; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, from which town it lies 7 miles south, and is 11 east-by-north from Dundee; it has a station on the joint line of the Caledonian and North British railways. The Bay, to the north-west of which the town stands, is large, but too open and shallow to be useful as a harbour, but the town, which is governed by a senior magistrate, two bailies and six police commissioners, is now much resorted to as a watering-place and has good bathing and accommodation for visitors, besides having some golf clubs, the links being considered the second best in Scotland. The burgh commissioners in 1895 constructed a reservoir at a cost of £1,900, and the supply of water is obtained from Dundee. The large jute works of Messrs. James Smieton and Sons employ about 400 hands, and there are besides a vitriol works and boot and shoe factories. The Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland Bank Limited have branches here, and there is also a Savings Bank. The town has an Established church, two Free and one Episcopal church, and chapels for the United Presbyterians and Original Seceders. The rateable value is £18,705; the population in 1891 was 4,134, and in 1881, 3,321.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed R.S.O. Forfarshire); John P. M. Lowson, postmaster. Arrivals, 7 & 10 a.m. & 4 & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 7 a.m. & 1.15, 3, 5 & 8 p.m

CRAIG is a parish on the east coast, occupying the peninsular south of Montrose basin and the creek which connects that water with the sea, and bounded on the south by Lunan Bay, is 6 miles from east to west by 2½ from north to south; it is in the small debt court district of Montrose, and contains the fishing villages of Ferryden and Usan. The nearest railway station is at Montrose, 1 mile north, and is on the Caledonian system. Dunninald is the residence of Capt. John Stansfeld, who with Edward Millar esq. and Grove Keith esq. are the principal landowners. Inchbrayock, or Rossie islet, in the creek, belongs to this parish. The land is arable, with plenty of limestone. The area comprises 4,371 acres; rateable value, £12,011; the population in 1891 was 2,472, and in 1881, 2,589.

Ferryden is one of the largest and wealthiest fishing villages on the east coast of Scotland, with a population of 1,482 in 1891, and 1,520 in 1881, and owning boats and other fishing appliances to the extent of upwards of £30,000.

DUN parish, 4 miles from east to west and 3½ from north to south, is bounded on the north by Stracathro and Logie-Pert, on the south by Maryton and Farnell, on the west by Brechin and on the east by Montrose, and lies between Montrose and Brechin, 5 miles east of the latter place, on the north bank of the South Esk; it has a station on the Caledonian railway, and is in the small debt court district of Montrose. The parish church is a plain stone building. The land is generally fertile, and the surface for the most part level. In the parish is a small lake, called Dun's Dish. Near the railway station is a bridge of three arches, erected in the year 1785-7, which crosses the South Esk river. The area comprises 4,306 acres; rateable value, £8,080; the population in 1891 was 552, and in 1881, 541.

DUNDEE.

DUNDEE is a seaport, royal burgh and parish, and since 1892 it has been a city; it is second in point of commercial position and third in population in Scotland; the city lies on the north bank of the Firth of Tay, about 9 miles from the mouth of the Firth, and the parish, which is about 5 miles east to west and 1 north to south, is bounded on the south by the Tay, on the north by the united parishes of Mains and Strathmartine, on the east by Murroes and Monifieth, and on the west by the united parish of Liff, Benvie and Invergowrie, a large portion of which is incorporated with the burgh. The city is 43 miles north from Edinburgh, 66 south-south-west from Aberdeen, 29 south-west from Montrose, 20 east-by-north from Perth, 17 south-west from Arbroath and 14 south from Forfar. The Caledonian and North British railways have each stations in the city. The Caledonian railway system connects Dundee with Perth, Stirling and the west of Scotland generally, and London and the south by the West Coast lines. One branch runs northward to Newtyle, Blairgowrie and Alyth, and another branch goes direct to Forfar, the county town. The Caledonian are joint owners with the North British Company of the Dundee and Arbroath railway, which connects Dundee with Arbroath, Montrose, Aberdeen and the whole north-east of Scotland. The North British has running powers for a certain distance over the east and west lines, and has a joint right in part of both the terminal stations—one at the east and the other at the west end of Dock street; the company has also constructed the Arbroath and Montrose direct line, which increases the facilities for communication between Dundee and the south-eastern portion of Forfarshire and the south-western portion of Kincardineshire. Alongside the west station at the end of Dock street is the North British or Tay Bridge station. In 1870 the North British Railway Company obtained an Act of Parliament for bridging the Tay at Dundee. The bridge was designed by Sir Thomas Bouch, the company's engineer, the plans being for a single line of rails only. Work was commenced in June, 1871, and after considerable delay the bridge was completed and opened for traffic on the 31st of May, 1878, and Mr. Bouch was shortly afterwards knighted. The bridge was 10,612 feet in length, and consisted of 85 spans, some of these being over 90 feet above high water level, and the cost was said to be £350,000; but on the evening of the 28th December, 1879, during the prevalence of a gale of unusual force, while the mail train from Edinburgh was passing over it, the whole of the "high girders," extending over 13 spans, were blown into the river, together with the train, leaving a gap of 3,000 feet, and upwards of 70 persons perished. During the short time the bridge was available, its great advantage as a link in connection with the railway system was clearly demonstrated; it was also seen that the direct communication opened up with the Fife coal fields would come to be of immense benefit; these considerations led the North British directors to take steps to build a new bridge, and plans by William Henry Barlow C.E., F.R.S. were approved by Parliament in May, 1881. The present bridge, starting from the south side of the Firth of Tay, near St. Fort, comprises 84 spans, varying in breadth from 50 to 245 feet; the first four above high water mark are continued by 23 of varying size, which take the line to the south side of the navigable channel, where they connect with the 14 great spans crossing the mid channel; of these, the southern ones vary in height above high water from 63 to 65 feet; the four main spans have a height of 77 feet clear, and those on the south 58 to 75 feet; 36 spans continue the bridge from the north side of the mid channel to Dundee shore, and seven land spans carry it into Dundee; the trains run on the lower part of the great spans, and on the upper portion of the others; the whole length is about 2 miles, and it has a double set of rails on a steel floor; the foundations are on iron caissons; the contractors were Messrs. Arrol and Company, of Glasgow, and the bridge was opened for general traffic in June, 1887.

The situation of Dundee is very beautiful, the river here forming a bay 2 miles broad, from the margin of which the town spreads over a gradual acclivity, ascending towards the base of a lofty and sheltering eminence called "Dundee Law." The picturesque coast of Fifeshire forms the southern border of the Tay, and a steam ferry-boat effects frequent communication between the opposite shores of the estuary. The greater part of the mansions of the opulent are ranged on the lofty bank of the Tay, westward of the town, here commanding a view of the river and the beautiful scenery on the opposite coast.

History.—Dundee is a place of considerable antiquity. From a fishing hamlet it came to be a walled town, with a castle of considerable strength. During the usurpation of Edward I. the town was made the station of an English garrison; and in the course of the struggle for the Scottish crown between that prince (nominally on behalf of Baliol) and Robert Bruce, Dundee was taken and retaken twice. The patriot Wallace, whose deeds have enkindled the enthusiasm of bard and historian, received his education at the Grammar School of Dundee. The castle of Dundee becoming so formidable an annoyance when in possession of an enemy, an occurrence but too frequent, Bruce deemed it expedient to demolish it, and not a vestige of it now remains. Its site was near the present Castle street—that street having been formed by blasting a portion of the rock on which it stood. The town was destroyed in the reign of Richard II. of England, and it suffered a similar infliction when Edward VI. sat upon the English throne; but on each occasion it speedily recovered, and resumed its rank among the principal Scottish towns, several times being pledged as security for ransoms, and for the fulfilment of treaties. It was also a place of royal residence, there being a palace (known as Whitehall) to the south of the Nethergate, and a mint at the foot of the Overgate, the site of which is still indicated by the name of "Mint Close," given to an entry in that quarter. Robert III. was the first sovereign who struck coin at the mint. Dudhope Castle, originally the seat of the Scrymgeour family, standard bearers to the Scottish kings, stands on the face of the rising ground to the north of the town, and was at one time the property of Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee: in recent times it was used as a military barracks, but the castle and grounds now form a part of the Barrack Park. In Dundee the reformed religion found some of its earliest and warmest defenders. So zealous was the town in its cause, as to be honoured with the appellation of "the second Geneva." In 1544 George Wishart, who suffered martyrdom at St. Andrews, preached here, and on one occasion narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of one of Cardinal Beaton's emissaries: the occasion was a sermon preached by Wishart, from the East Port, during the plague—the plague-stricken being outside the wall: in memory of the event the East Port or Cowgate, the only portion of the old walls extant, is still kept standing. In April, 1645, the Duke of Montrose took Dundee by assault. The last calamity of this kind that befell the town was its capture and plunder a few years later by General Monk: this event is the subject of many local traditions. A few eminent men have conferred honour on Dundee, from its being the place either of their birth, education or labour:—Hector Boece, the historian; Sir William Wallace; John Blair; Goldman and Ferguson, the poets; Sir George Mackenzie, the scholar and lawyer; and in more recent days, Drs. Small, Willison, Davidson and Russell; Nicoll, the poet; George Gilfillan, the critic and preacher; Dr. Thomas Dick, the astronomer and christian philosopher; and the naval victor, Admiral Duncan. The author of the "Song of the Shirt," Thomas Hood, also resided in the town for a short time, and some of his first efforts at versifying appeared in the columns of the "Dundee Advertiser."

Municipal.—Dundee was created a royal burgh by William I. (William the Lion), in return for attention paid to his brother the Earl of Huntingdon, who, returning from the Crusades, was shipwrecked in the neighbourhood. The oldest charter, now extant, is one granted by Robert Bruce, confirming these burghal privileges. It was made a city by a royal charter granted in 1892, and in 1894 created a county, the lord provost being lord lieutenant of the same. The municipal government of Dundee is exercised by a lord provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, an hospital master, a kirk master, and a council of, including the magistrates, 28 members. There are 13 trade guilds, viz.: the Masons, Wrights and Slaters (known as the Three United Trades), the Bakers, Shoe Makers, Glovers, Tailors, Bonnet Makers, Fleshers, Hammermen, Weavers, Dyers and the Maltmen incorporation. Six courts are held within the town—the Burgh of Bailie Court, the Sheriff's Court, the Commissary Court, the Guild Court, the Police Court and the Justice of Peace Small Debt Court. The city is divided into nine districts and wards. Dundee sends two representatives to Parliament. The larger portion of the city is lighted with gas from works the property of the burgh and under the control of the corporation, but in March, 1892, the central portion of the city was supplied with electric lamps from new works, erected by the corporation; these are in Dudhope crescent, and cost for buildings and fittings &c. £30,000. The corporation also own the waterworks, drawing their supplies from Loch Lintrathen and the river Tay. The Town House, now called the Council Chambers, comprises Guild Hall, Court Room, Record Chamber and other offices; it stands in the High street, and is a fine building; it was finished in 1734, from a plan of the elder Adams; the front has beneath it a piazza, and from the centre of the building rises a spire 140 feet high; a large addition was made to the building in 1873, with the view of accommodating all the public offices.

Commerce and Manufactures.—Dundee is a place of great commercial activity, and is the principal seat of the linen and jute industries; the rapid increase, both of its productions and shipping, is the most striking feature of its recent history. When Monk captured the place in 1651, 60 vessels were found in the harbour, so richly laden as to afford a booty to the captors exceeding in value the whole of their spoils "in the wars throughout the three nations;" the plunder, however, did not enrich the captors, for the ships sunk in passing the bar. For several years subsequently few vessels floated in the deserted harbour; but in 1669, however, 37 vessels arrived in the port; in 1673, 49; in 1680, 85; but in 1731 the number had considerably decreased, and the trade continued to dwindle till this once flourishing port was resorted to chiefly by fishermen and smugglers. But the situation of Dundee, the commodiousness of its harbour, and the enterprise of its inhabitants, caused the tide of commerce to turn, and Dundee, from 1792, has continued to progress. In 1745 the port dues scarcely amounted to £1,200; but in 1792 the number of vessels belonging to the town had increased to 116, of 8,550 tons; and about the same period the foreign clearances outwards and inwards were nearly 12,000 tons, while the coasting trade was about 60,000. Since 1815 the increase has been enormous, and the total revenue from all sources from that date, until May, 1894, amounted in the aggregate to £2,375,101. During the year ending May, 1894, the revenue amounted to £57,023; in the year ending May, 1861, it was only £25,329. In consequence of the augmentation of its shipping, new sea walls and quays were built, the tidal harbour was extended, wet docks and graving docks constructed, and such undertakings were effected that there are but few ports in Great Britain which afford greater facilities and accommodation for shipping. In 1815 the management of the harbour was placed in the hands of commissioners, appointed annually under an Act of Parliament; but by an Act passed in June, 1830, the control was transferred to trustees, elected annually, the provost, bailies and dean of guild to be perpetual trustees, in virtue of their office. The total expenditure for maintaining the harbour from July, 1815, to May 31, 1894, inclusive of interest on debt and sinking fund, was £2,090,012. The total cost of harbour and property up to same date amounted to £1,107,470. The debt due by the Dundee Harbour on the 31st May, 1894, amounted to £433,745. The progressive increase of revenue will appear from the following statement:—

The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1894 was 171, of the aggregate register of about 125,534 tons. The whale fishery employs several ships from this port. Steam navigation is conducted by the Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping Company, whose vessels ply to London twice a week, and to Hull, weekly. There is also regular steam communication with Newcastle, Liverpool, Manchester, Hamburg, Rotterdam, Belfast &c. besides several large steamers engaged in the coal trade. Direct steam communication is carried on with New York at irregular intervals. The number of fishing boats registered at Dundee under the "Sea Fisheries Act, 1868," was in 1894, 188, aggregate tonnage, 1,725 tons, employing 688 hands; besides 7 other vessels, aggregate tonnage 196 tons (4 of which were steamers). The total number of ships built in Dundee in the year 1894 was 9; burthen, 5,440 tons; of these one of 2,915 tons was a steel sailing vessel, built for foreigners; the others consisted of six steel, one iron and one wooden steamers.

The earliest articles produced in the town seem to have been soap and glass, which engaged a number of hands; and the brewing of ale was carried on to some extent. The glass manufacture has died out, as has also the sugar refining, which was once carried on. In 1866, however, linseed crushing was established, and has since been carried on to a moderate extent. The manufacture of shoe uppers by the sewing machine was introduced by Messrs. Henderson (whose tanning and leather works are on a very extensive scale). The wholesale shoe trade, which at one time flourished in this town, has been revived, and there are two large factories, employing a considerable number of persons. The manufacture of marmalade has for many years employed a large number of hands, Dundee marmalade being famous throughout the world. Messrs. Keiller and Sons' establishment is probably the largest in the kingdom, and there are other firms extensively engaged in the trade. At an early period the wants of shipping led to the introduction of the manufacture of cordage, which still remains a branch of commerce, but not to such an extent as formerly.

The manufacture of cotton was once tried, and had the appearance of forming an important branch in the trade of Dundee, having at one time seven companies engaged in it; but at length it declined, and finally died away, in favour of Glasgow. The production of woollen cloths was next attempted, but met with no success. Out of these failures arose a spirit for manufacturing goods from flax; and as an encouragement to this branch in its infancy, a bounty was given by the Government on all linen exported, and a heavy duty laid on the importation of foreign linens. Whatever the effect of these enactments, the trade of Dundee continued to increase, and since the introduction of the jute manufacture, the progress of the city has been very great.

The following returns of the quantities of flax &c. imported in various years since 1745, will show the progress of the flax trade:—

Jute was first brought into notice at Dundee by the late Thomas Neish esq. but as the fibre was hard and difficult to work, it did not attract much attention at first; improved machinery, however, and the discovery of the means of softening the fibre, caused jute to gradually grow more in favour, until the outbreak of the civil war in America, producing a stoppage of the cotton supply, gave the trade an impetus which has continuously increased, owing to the cheapness at which cloth can be produced from the fibre, and its usefulness for various important purposes. At first the fibre was imported in small quantities to London and Liverpool, and thence trans-shipped to Dundee; but as the trade grew in importance, manufacturers imported direct from Calcutta, and the direct imports now greatly exceed those into London. Most of the jute received in Liverpool and London also finds its way to Dundee. In 1849 the imports (exclusive of coast-ways) amounted to 8,176 tons; in 1850, 8,127 tons were received. In 1865 the receipts at the harbour, both coast-ways and from Calcutta, reached 36,291 tons. To give an idea of the expansion of the trade, we give the following returns for the years ending 31st May, 1871, 1876, 1881, 1886 and 1891:—

Other imports from foreign countries to which attention may be directed are timber and whale and seal blubber, the former being about 50,000 loads annually, and the latter varying according to the success or failure of the fishing, but probably averaging not less than 2,500 tons each season. The oil produced from this blubber is chiefly used for "batching" the jute in its raw state, in order to soften the fibre and facilitate the various operations of preparing and spinning. The exports of manufactured goods from the harbour by no means represent the extent of business done in the town, the larger portion of the manufactured goods being sent by rail to Glasgow and Liverpool for export to the United States, South America, Australia &c. Five years ago Dundee was also licensed as a cattle port. Extensive wharf accommodation was provided at Carolina Port for that purpose, and a great trade commenced in the importation of Canadian cattle, but since the autumn of 1892, when the Board of Agriculture resolved that all cattle from Canadian ports must be slaughtered at the port of landing, the trade has entirely ceased. Fifty years ago there were only four steam spinning mills; there are now probably above 100, including spinning and weaving factories, where thread is woven into osnaburghs, sheetings, baggings, sailcloth, sacking, dowlas &c. At the commencement of the civil war in America, as has been said, the trade of Dundee increased to a most extraordinary extent, fabrics of jute and linen being in great demand to take the place of cotton. The manufacture of machinery, steam engines, boilers and millwright work is in a flourishing condition and carried on extensively by several eminent firms, among whom may be mentioned Messrs. Carmichael and Co. Limited, Ward foundry; Thomson, Son and Co. Douglas foundry; Urquhart, Lindsay and Co. Blackness foundry; W. B. Thompson and Co. Limited, Lilybank and Tay foundries; Gourlay, Brothers and Co. Dundee foundry; and Robertson and Orchar, Wallace foundry. Iron ship building and marine engineering are also important features in the general prosperity and industry of the city, and give employment to a large number of artisans. Messrs. Gourlay Brothers and Co., The Dundee Ship Builders' Co. Limited and W. B. Thompson and Co. Limited, are the principal firms engaged in these important industries. There are also several extensive saw mills and timber yards, the principal of which belong to Messrs. Bell and Sime Limited and Messrs. Fleming and Barry Limited.

Descriptive Sketch.—Although Dundee is not conspicuous for architectural beauty, it contains several handsome streets. In the central portion is a wide oblong area, called the High street, on the south side of which stands the Town House. Directly south of this street lie the Docks, and to the south-west the terminal stations of the North British and Caledonian railways, and northward various streets lead to Barrack Park and the high ground known as Dundee Law. An elegant building has been erected by the Clydesdale Bank Limited, at the east end of High street, in connection with the improvements carried out by the corporation in that quarter. Dock street runs from the railway stations along the line of Docks, and from the west end of Dock street, Union street forms a communication with the Nethergate; it contains excellent shops; running north from the centre of Dock street, New Commercial street is a splendid thoroughfare, lined on either side by elegant shops and houses, and the old narrow dingy Murraygate and Seagate have given place to wide streets. A new street, with highly ornate buildings, was completed in 1893; it runs from the Nethergate southwards; at the lower end it curves semi-circularly towards South Union street on the west, and Green market on the east. In Reform street stands a building with Doric portico, in which is located the High School. The Albert Institute, completed in 1874, is to the south-east of the High school, the western portion erected from designs by Sir Gilbert Scott, and the eastern and northern portions from those by Mr. Mackenzie, a local architect, and Mr. Alexander, the city architect; the cost of the entire building was about £50,000, exclusive of the site, which cost £8,000. The building comprises a large hall, used as the reference library, libraries, reading room, museum and picture gallery. The design is Decorated Gothic, with a grand staircase on the west front. The libraries, reading room, museum and galleries are free to the public, the town having some years ago adopted the Free Libraries Act. Adjoining are the Victoria Art Galleries, opened by the Marquess of Lorne on Oct. 26th, 1889. In the grounds in front of the Albert Institute is a statue of George Kinloch, the first representative of the burgh in the first reformed Parliament; it is of bronze, and does great credit to the artist, Mr. Steell, of Edinburgh; in the south-west corner of the grounds, a bronze statue of Burns, also by Steell, has been placed. There is also a statue by John Hutchison R.S.A. in the same grounds, of the late James Carmichael, the inventor of the fan blast. A fountain, erected at considerable cost, faces the west front of the Institute. The Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, Panmure street, erected in 1852, at a cost of about £10,000, is a building in the Flemish-Gothic style of the 14th century, with a fine tower. To the south of the Albert Institute stand a Club House, in the Venetian style, the Free Gaelic church, and the National Bank buildings. The Royal arch, in the centre of Dock street and spanning the north end of the M d quay, is a structure surmounting three arches, a capacious central one and two of smaller dimensions at the sides; the style is Norman, and each front is richly sculptured; octagonal turrets rise from the summit; this costly monument was raised to commemorate the landing near this spot of H.M. Queen Victoria, on her first visit. The Custom House, in Dock street, is a building with a Grecian portico. Opposite the Custom House a Sailors' Home has been erected, and opened by the late Earl of Dalhousie on 16th December, 1881; this building cost upwards of £12,000, and it is designed in the Elizabethan style; there is sleeping room for about 100 seamen, and provision has been made for the comfort of those who avail themselves of the accommodation provided. The offices of the Mercantile Marine Department are in the same building. The Public Hall, in Bank street, (for which the inhabitants of Dundee are mainly indebted to Lord Kinnaird), is in the Anglo-Italian style, and its interior is plain, but bold and massive in detail; above the entrance lobbies, and projecting into the hall, is a gallery for about 200 people; the hall itself is an apartment 130 by 60 feet, and 42 feet 6 inches high, with room for about 2,500 people. In 1864 £1,500 was subscribed for the organ, inaugurated on the 5th October, 1865, by a grand performance of Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," by the Dundee Cecilia Society. The orchestra in front of the organ will accommodate some 280 performers. Near Barrack Park stands the gaol, in front of which is the Court House, in which the assizes are held; this building is in the Tuscan style, upon the pediment of which the Royal arms are boldly sculptured. At the top of Reform street, and corner of Ward road, are the Post and Telegraph Offices, a building in the Italian style; this, for a considerable period, was found sufficiently commodious, but the recent great expansion in the postal and telegraph business of the city has rendered it too contracted: a larger structure is now (1896) being erected upon a site in Meadowside: this new Post Office will be a building of three flats and attics, in the French Renaissance style, of Grange, Burntisland stone, and is to cost £21,366; Messrs. J. and C. Hay, of this city, are the contractors.

Ecclesiastical.—The "Old Steeple," in the Nethergate, a little west of High street, is a fine solid tower, built, it would appear from its style, about the early part of the 15th century, though popularly assigned to David, Earl of Huntingdon; it is 156 feet high, with walls 8 feet thick, and formerly contained 2 bells, the larger recast in 1819 and the smaller bearing date of 1693; but when the "Steeple" was restored in 1872, under the superintendence of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, 6 more bells were provided, being gifts from various citizens, and the whole 8 were rehung in the bell chamber: this "Steeple" forms the tower of the town churches, of which there are three, all connected with the tower, and known as the East, the South and the Steeple churches; the two first were destroyed by fire in 1841, but were rebuilt in a very short time, the East church being re-opened on the 10th March, 1844, and the South church in 1847; the same architect, Mr. Burn, of Edinburgh, designed both churches, which are in the Decorated style: the East church measures, externally, 88 feet in length and 66 in width, and consists of a nave of five bays, with clerestory and open timber roof and side aisles divided from the nave by arcades of clustered pillars, the nave is 27 feet in width and the aisles 12 feet each: the principal door is at the east end, behind the pulpit, and there are galleries in the aisles and across the west end: the east window of three lights is stained, and contains the arms of the town in the centre, those of the fraternity of Merchant Seamen in the north, and the arms of the Maltmen and of the "Three United Trades" in the south: the South church measures, externally, 109 feet in length by 40 feet in width; it stands north and south, and in the centre it has a west transept in line with the Steeple church, 32 feet in depth, and containing a gallery. St. Clement's, or "The Steeple" church, which is the western of the three, is a plain structure of stone in the Perpendicular style, and was erected in 1789: the internal dimensions are—length, 90 feet; width, 56 feet: a gallery surrounds three sides. These three churches are really one large building, the Steeple church being the nave, the South church the north and south transepts, and the East church the chancel, and occupy the site of the original church of St. Mary. Adjoining these churches is the Town or Market Cross, moved from High street; this is of the usual form of Scottish town crosses, a pillar surmounted by a unicorn supporting a shield.

Of late years several churches have been erected in the town. Free St. Paul's and St. Enoch's Established church in the Nethergate, and St. Mark's Established church, Free St. John's, Ryehill, U.P. church, and the M'Cheyne Memorial church, in the Perth road, may be particularly mentioned. A little to the east of the High street, is St. Paul's Episcopal church, built on the Castle hill, near to the site of the ancient castle; it is in the Gothic style, from designs of Sir Gilbert Scott, with a tower and lofty spire, fitted with a peal of bells. Adjoining the church of St. Andrew, in the Cowgate, is a meeting-house for the Glassites—a sect founded by Mr. John Glass, who, it appears, was made a freeman of Dundee by the town council in 1753. The Gilfillan Memorial Hall, Whitehall crescent, occupies a fine site facing the north, in Whitehall street, and is used for worship by the congregation of the Rev. David Macrae; it is also adapted for holding concerts and meetings on week evenings.

Schools.—The High School, in Reform street, was erected in 1834, at a cost of £10,000, since which extensive additions have been made to it, including a gymnasium and workshop: a spacious structure, containing class rooms for girls, has also been erected in Euclid street: these schools now rank with the best in the country for accommodation and efficiency: the curriculum includes all the branches embraced in what is known as a liberal education: on the modern side the pupils are trained for commercial life, whilst on the classical side they receive an education which fits them to enter the universities, with the advantage of being well grounded in literature, science and the ancient and modern languages: the institution is largely indebted to the late ex-Bailie Harris, who gave £20,000 for the purpose of improving it: Miss Harris, sister of the above, has also been a great benefactor. Besides the above munificent bequest to the High Schools, Mr. Harris bequeathed the sum of £10,000 for the erection of a building, which has been named after him—the Harris Academy—at which secondary education and the elements of science are taught by a very efficient staff. The Morgan Hospital, occupying a commanding site, of massive and striking proportions, is seen to advantage from all the higher parts of the town, as well as from the river: the institution owes its existence to the benevolence of the late Mr. Morgan, a native of Dundee, who left the bulk of his fortune to carry out the above-mentioned objects: the total sum secured—after a law plea in regard to the validity of the will—for the erection and maintenance of the institution was £73,500: it was originally erected for the education and maintenance of 100 boys, the sons of tradesmen, mechanics and persons of the working classes generally, whose parents stood in need of assistance, and who were only admitted between the ages of seven and ten years, and left at the age of fifteen years: one or both of the parents of the boys must have been born in Dundee, Forfar, Montrose or Arbroath, the preference being given to the boys of parents belonging to this town. In 1889 the Endowed Schools Commission converted this building into a secondary school on similar lines to the Harris Academy already noticed, which has much enhanced its usefulness: the building is in the Flemish-Gothic style, and is quadrangular in form, two storeys in height, with an open court inside and a centre tower rising to the height of 120 feet, the whole being erected from designs by Peddie and Kinnear, architects, Edinburgh, at a cost of about £15,000. University College, another noble educational institution, has also been established in the town, and through the munificence of the late Miss Baxter, of Belgavies, and her relation, the late Dr. Boyd Baxter, a sum of £150,000 was provided for this purpose: an excellent site, known as the Whiteleys, in the Nethergate, was secured, on which there were four large dwelling houses and a church belonging to the congregation of Free St. John's; these were utilised as class rooms and laboratories, the church making an excellent college hall: on a portion of the vacant ground a large chemical laboratory was erected at a cost of about £10,000: in all £50,000 was spent in purchasing and equipping the buildings, and £100,000 appropriated as a permanent endowment fund: the deed of endowment and trust directs that the college shall be for promoting the education of persons of both sexes for the study of science, literature and the fine arts: the institution is entirely unsectarian, and has been affiliated to the ancient University of St. Andrews. A medical school has also been established in connection with the college; for this purpose the late Mr. Thomas H. Cox gave the handsome donation of £12,000, and the son and daughter of the late Mr. J. H. White, £6,000, so that there is every prospect of it proving a success: there are at present ten chairs in the college. The Technical Institute, opened in 1892, was established with the sum of £20,000 (since increased to about £26,000), left by the late Sir David Baxter for the establishment of a school for the instruction and training of artisans in their various trades and arts; this has been erected on the grounds of University College, where its laboratories will be available, as well as the services of efficient teachers: there were nearly 700 students attending the institute during session 1894-95. The School Board includes under their control the Harris Academy and the Morgan Hospital; the Board has altogether 22 schools, the majority of which have been erected since the Education Act came into force. The Royal Orphan Institution, founded in 1815, is an admirable charity, the orphans being located in a commodious building at Craigie terrace, overlooking the river. The Dundee Industrial Schools Society have two excellent institutions for the educational training of neglected children; one, for girls, in a building in Ward's road, the other, for boys, is at Baldovan, a healthy village to the north of the town. The Mars Training Ship Institution for Homeless and Destitute Boys, is located in the "Mars," an old three-decker, moored in the Tay, at Woodhaven, and several hundred boys are educated on board, chiefly with a view to their either joining merchant vessels or entering the Royal Navy. An institution for the education of the deaf and dumb, established in 1846, and situated at Dudhope Bank, Lochee road, is another noteworthy educational enterprise of a charitable nature; this is maintained by the directors of the Dundee Association for Aiding the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, from the interest of invested funds, and from property left by the late James Key esq. The Dundee Royal Lunatic Asylum occupy buildings, erected in 1882, at West Green, about 5 miles west of Dundee, which will hold upwards of 300 patients: in style the building is very simple, but the gables are crow-stepped, with turrets introduced to give it an old Scotch character: the directors have decided to erect an addition to the present building, so as to provide for 40 more beds: the grounds in connection extend to nearly 100 acres: Messrs. Edward and Robertson, Dundee, were the architects, and the cost was about £46,000. The Poor House, capable of holding about 300 inmates, was opened for their reception in November, 1856, and cost about £10,000: since that time wings for hospital purposes have been built at the sole expense of Mr. Molison, chairman of the Parochial Board, at a cost of upwards of £1,000; and in 1893 a sick hospital was built, containing 320 beds, at a cost of £25,000. The Curr Night Refuge, in West Bell street, erected by money left by the late Mrs. Curr, affords a retreat for the night to homeless strangers. The Royal Infirmary, erected in 1853, near to the Barrack Park, is from designs by Messrs. Coe and Goodwin, of London, and has, with its wings, central tower and embattled parapets, a noble appearance: the infirmary provides for 300 in-patients, and during 1894 no fewer than 2,500 patients were treated in the wards, and nearly 15,000 others as out-patients: a new operation theatre was erected in 1895, at a cost of £2,000. A Public Gymnasium, in the Ward road, was opened in 1892; it is in the French Renaissance style, designed by Bailie M'Culloch, of Dundee: within, it is spacious and well appointed, and suitable for the practice of all kinds of gymnastic exercises. Adjoining the old entrance to the barracks is the public bleaching green; near this spot a time gun has been placed.

Besides the burial grounds belonging to the corporation, the Dundee Cemetery Co. Limited, in the Perth road, has a beautiful site, and is gracefully planted with shrubs and flowers; it covers an area of 12 acres of ground: in this cemetery lie the remains of William Thom, known as the Inverury Poet, and the author of the "Mitherless Bairn." To the east of the Baxter Park is the Eastern Necropolis, a beautifully laid out cemetery.

In 1863 a splendid public park of upwards of 30 acres was presented to the town by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and endowed with funds necessary to maintain it: the park, which is at the east end of the town, was beautifully laid out by the late Sir Joseph Paxton, and, with the endowment, cost Sir David not less than £50,000. In 1869 the corporation acquired Balgay Hill, a wooded eminence at the west end of the town, to be used partly as a public park and partly as a cemetery for the west end of the burgh; the portion retained as a public park is 36 acres in extent, finely wooded, and from the higher parts of the ground magnificent views are obtained. The Law Hill, behind the town, has also been laid out as a place of recreation. In addition to the two parks mentioned, the inhabitants have the privilege of using the Magdalen Green, close by the river at the west end of the town, and the Barrack Park, which was acquired by the corporation early in 1895, as places of recreation. The "Esplanade" was formed by an arrangement with the railway companies when the Tay Bridge Works were constructed, and has recently been extended to the westward.

Newspapers.—There are two daily morning papers, the "Dundee Courier" and "The Dundee Advertiser," and one daily evening paper, "The Evening Telegraph" (a halfpenny paper). The weekly papers, six in number, are "The Weekly News," "The People's Journal," "The Dundee Catholic Herald," "The Scottish Fancier and Rural Gazette" (a paper for country interests), "The People's Friend" (a weekly issue of tales and literary miscellany), and one comic paper, "The Piper;" "The Wizard of the North," another comic, being issued monthly. On a commanding site in Lindsay street the premises of the "Dundee Courier" and "Dundee Weekly News" are situated; these buildings, which were only erected a few years ago to provide for an increasing business, are of a chaste and striking architectural design: the front edifice is occupied by the commercial, warehouse, publishing, reporting and editorial departments: behind the main building the composing and machine departments are accommodated in a handsome two-storey structure. The proprietors of "The Dundee Weekly News" have acquired the site of the present Post Office, and intend to erect a printing and publishing office on it. Immediately opposite the Kinnaird Hall stands a building, 215 feet in length and five storeys in height, with a sunk floor containing printing machinery &c. the printing establishment of the "Dundee Advertiser," "People's Journal," "Evening Telegraph" and "People's Friend:" on the ground floor are the publishing and business departments: the second floor is mainly devoted to the accommodation of the editorial, reporting and literary staff, and job printing; and on the third floor is the newspaper composing department: a direct telegraph wire connects the establishment with a branch office in Fleet street, London.

The principal market days are Tuesday and Friday; and there is a cattle and sheep market held every Tuesday. Fairs—Stobb's fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 11th July, or the first Tuesday following (o.s.); Dundee first fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 26th August, if that day falls on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, if not, the first Tuesday after the 26th August (n.s.); and the second Dundee fair on the 19th September, the same rule observed as that regulating the first fair. Feeing markets for servants are held on the 28th May and on the 28th November, or on the first Friday thereafter.

The population of the city (or royal burgh) in 1891, was 153,587, in the parishes of Dundee, Liff, Benvie, Invergowrie, Mains and Strathmartine, and in 1881, 142,455, and this year (1895) it is estimated as 160,000. In the parish, the Right Hon. the Earl of Home, of Harecraig and Douglas, David Charles Guthrie esq. of Craigie, and Robert McGavin esq. J.P. of Ballumbie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,432 acres, and the population in 1891 was 109,875, of whom 107,250 were in the burgh, and in 1881, 100,598 (98,205 within the burgh). The rateable value of the city is £738,333 1s.; of Liff and Benvie, £16,550 9s.; of Dundee Landward, £12,289 10s. and of West Ferry, £11,555 18s.; total, £778,728 18s.

LOCHEE is an important suburb, and forms part of the royal burgh of Dundee, within the united parish of Liff and Benvie, extending one mile and a half north-west from Dundee. It occupies a large space, being much scattered. It contains several mills and factories for the spinning and manufacturing of flax, jute &c.; the principal of these being the Camperdown Jute Works, belonging to Messrs. Cox Brothers Limited, which are the largest of this kind in the world, and cover a space of about 25 acres, giving employment to about 5,000 persons in the various processes of jute spinning, dyeing, bleaching, calendering, power and hand-loom weaving in all the various fabrics, including hemp and jute carpeting and matting, jute carpet printing, and jute twine and rope spinning: these works have a tower with a peal of fine-toned bells, and a clock with four dials, which are illuminated at night. The Dundee and Newtyle branch of the Caledonian railway passes through this place, and is connected by a branch. There are two railway stations, one in Lochee and the other at Camperdown, about a mile north. In the immediate neighbourhood are several quarries of excellent freestone, which have been wrought for a long period. There are branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, and also a Savings Bank. The late Mr. Thomas H. Cox, of Duncarse and Maulsden, placed at the disposal of the Town Council of Dundee a sum of money to found a Free Library, and a building was opened Dec. 1895, in High street, providing for a Free Public Library and Reading Room with Baths. Camperdown House is the residence of the Earl of Camperdown. There are two Established churches (St. Luke's being the gift of Thomas H. Cox esq.), a Free church, and a chapel each for the Episcopalians, Baptists, Roman Catholics and United Presbyterians; the latter congregation have erected a handsome edifice at a cost of upwards of £6,000, in the Middle Pointed Gothic style, 71 feet by 58 feet inside, and 33 feet high; it affords 1,000 sittings: at the south-west angle is a tower and spire rising to a height of 130 feet, containing a peal of 8 bells; they were the first erected in any church in the burgh of Dundee, and were presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers. Another United Presbyterian church was in 1895 erected in Logie street, to hold 700. There are also three public schools and a half-time Free school, the latter having been built in 1884 by Messrs. Cox Brothers, at a cost of about £2,000. Four manses have been erected for the ministers of the United Presbyterian and two Established churches. Lochee Park, the gift of Messrs. Cox Brothers, comprises 25 acres, and was presented to the town of Dundee free of cost; it has a lodge of two storeys, in the Early English style, with tower: the whole cost upwards of £20,000, the park being endowed. In 1881, Lochee was returned as having a population of 15,000; the census of 1891 gave the registration district as containing 13,867 persons.

DUNNICHEN, supposed to be derived from Dun Achen (the hill or foot of the valley), is a parish, extending 4 miles from north to south and from 2 to 4 in breadth, and containing the villages of Letham and Craichie; it is in the small debt court district of Forfar, and is bounded on the north-west and west by Forfar parish, south-west by Inverarity, north by Rescobie and east by Kirkden. The Caledonian railway from Dundee to Forfar passes through the north-west of the parish, the nearest station being at Kingsmuir. There is an Established church at Dunnichen Kirktown and one at Letham, where there is also a Free church. The greatest elevations are the hills of Dunnichen, 800 feet, and the hill of Dumbarrow, 700 feet above the level of the sea. The medium elevation of the parish is 360 feet above the sea level, and consists of undulations or ridges running from west to east, the greatest descent being towards Vinney Water (the only stream which runs through the parish), on the south. Sandstone and freestone abound in the parish. The land, which is nearly all arable, is tolerably fertile. Lady Dempster Metcalfe and Sir Thomas Dawson Brodie bart. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,917 acres; rateable value, £6,649; population in 1891 was 1,308, against 1,422 in 1881.

EASSIE and NEVAY, a joint parish in the small debt court district of Forfar, bounded east and south-east by the parish of Glamis, south by Newtyle and north by Airlie, extends 5 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth. The Caledonian railway (Forfar and Coupar Angus branch) has a station in the parish. The land is flat and has good pasturage. The parish church, a neat building, was erected in 1833. In the garden of the old manse stands the ruins of a Roman Catholic church, the graveyard adjoining being remarkable on account of its gravestones being engraved in old Roman letters. The Earl of Wharncliffe D.L. and the Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,053 acres; rateable value, £6,532; the population in 1891 was 553, and in 1881, 561.

EDZELL is a parish and village on the north-east border of the county, a small portion of the parish being in Kincardineshire; it is bounded east and north by that county, north-west by the parish of Lochlee, west by Lethnot and south-west by Stracathro; is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin, and extends 12 miles from south-east to north-west by 6 in breadth. The North flows in a south-east course through the entire length and the West water along its lower border. The nearest railway station is that of Brechin, on the Caledonian line, 6 miles south, and it is proposed to make a new line to Edzell. The village is lighted by gas and has two main streets. The southern spurs of the Grampians occupy the upper part of the parish, which is an agricultural district with a fertile soil. The ruins of the Castle of Edzell, once the seat of the Lindsays of Glen Esk, form a prominent object. The Earl of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 18,959 acres; rateable value, £6,655; the population in 1891 was 700, and in 1881, 788.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; John Thomson, postmaster. Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 12 p.m.; dispatches, 11 a.m. & 2 p.m.; open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Letters should be addressed "near Brechin." Post messengers are dispatched to Lethnot & Lochlee at 12.10 noon

FEARN is a parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin, 6 miles west from that town, and bounded on the north and north-east by the parish of Lethnot and Navar, east by Menmuir, south by the Water of Noran and west by Tannadice; its length north to south is 6 miles, breadth 3. The Cruick water, rising in the hills in the north, runs through the centre of the parish. The nearest railway station is at Tannadice, on the Forfar and Brechin section of the Caledonian line. The surface is a rolling country, well cultivated and wooded. The ruins of the once powerful Castle of Vano stand on the Noran water. The area comprises 8,792 acres; rateable value, £3,928; the population was 277 in 1891, and 316 in 1881.

Post Office; James Miller, postmaster. Letters arrive at 11.20 a.m. & are dispatched at 11.40 a.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Brechin

FORFAR.

FORFAR is a royal burgh, parish, seat of a presbytery and head of a poor law combination, a small debt court district and a registration district; it is 57 miles north from Edinburgh, 15 north-west from Arbroath, 15 north-by-east from Dundee and 11 south-west from Brechin; it has a station on the Caledonian railway, whose lines from Newtyle, Brechin, Broughty Ferry and Arbroath (this latter a joint line with the North British) meet here, and there are two other stations in the parish, Kingsmuir and Clocksbriggs. The town is supplied with gas from works in North street. Water was introduced from the Den of Ogil in 1881. The burgh unites with Montrose, Brechin, Inverbervie and Arbroath in sending one member to Parliament. The original charters which constitute Forfar a royal burgh are lost, but the privileges were confirmed in 1669, in virtue of which the burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies and eleven councillors, a third of whom are elected annually. The revenue of the burgh, arising from lands, customs &c. may be averaged at about £2,700 yearly. A sheriff's court is held for the trial of civil and criminal cases generally; and a police court for the determination of local, civil and police affairs. The date of the erection of Forfar Castle, which stood upon an eminence to the north of the town, cannot be certified, but is said to have been the place of meeting of the first Parliament, convened by King Malcolm Canmore, and his occasional seat of residence after the recovery of his throne from Macbeth. The magistrates of the burgh some years since removed the market cross from the street to the site of the old castle, to mark the spot where that monarch sojourned, as but few remains of the edifice are now extant. In the old churchyard lies the remains of George Don, the celebrated botanist, who died in the early part of this century. Dr. Jamieson, the compiler of the "Scottish Dictionary," was minister of the Anti-Burgher congregation of this place from 1780 to 1797, when he left for Edinburgh. About 1 mile east are the remains of Restennet Priory, which stood near Clocksbriggs. On the west side of the town is a fine loch, nearly a mile in length by half a mile in breadth. Upon a small artificial island, near the north end of the loch, anciently stood a nunnery, founded by Queen Margaret as a separate establishment from her husband Malcolm. At the partial drainage of the lake, many years since, for the purpose of obtaining its fertilising marl, some weapons and instruments were found at the bottom; these were conjectured to have been the implements used by the murderers of Malcolm II. at Glamis, on the ground of a tradition which asserts that the assassins, in attempting to cross the lake on the ice, went down and perished. The chief trade of the town consists in weaving jute and linen and bleaching; there are eight factories and two bleach works, employing over 3,000 hands. Six banking establishments have branches, viz.: the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank and the Bank of Scotland; there is likewise the Forfar Savings Bank. The market is held on Saturday, for butter and grain, and cattle markets are held every Monday at the Auction Marts, two adjoining the Railway station. A fair is held on the Market Muir for horses and cattle on the second Wednesday in each month from April to November. There are two weekly newspapers published on Friday, "The Forfar Herald" and "The Forfar Review." There are several good hotels, the principal being the County and Commercial, the Royal, Castle street, and Jarman's and the Station, opposite the Railway station. Municipal buildings were recently erected in Castle street, and the town has latterly been much improved, and now contains many well-built houses and handsome shops. A large number of villas have been built to the south and west of the town. A Public Hall, the free gift of ex-Provost Peter Reid, stands near the Railway station, and a Public Park of about 15 acres, on the south side of the town, the gift of the same donor, is being laid out. The Town and County Hall contains a spacious upper room for public meetings and amusements: the Free Library Act was adopted in 1870, and there is a newsroom and library, the latter comprising upwards of 6,000 volumes, located on the ground floor of this building.

The places of worship are two churches under the Establishment, two Free, an Episcopal, a Congregational, a United Presbyterian, a Baptist and a Roman Catholic church. In the steeple of the parish church is a very fine bell, presented to the town in the 17th century by a native named Strang, who, having amassed a large fortune at Stockholm, bequeathed a large sum of money for the benefit of the poor of the town. The bell is large, and bears the following inscription:—

For the Glory of God and Love he did beare to his native
Towne Hathe umqll Robert Strang friely giffted this bell to the Churche of the Burghe of Forfar, who deceased in the Lord in Stockholme the 21st day of Aprill anno 1651.

This bell is perfected and augmented by William Strang and his wife, Margaret Patullo, in Stockholm, 1656.

Gloria deo in excelsis deo et in terra Pax Hominibus Bona Voluntas anno 1656.

PS. CXXII. LÆTATUS SUM IN HIS QUÆ
DICTA SUNT, MIHI IN DOMUM DOMINI
IBIMUS STANTES ERUNT PEDES NOSTRI
IN ATRYS TUIS JERUS ALEM ME FÆCET
GERDT. MEYER ANNO 1656.

The kirk session records date from 1693 onwards and are in a good state of preservation.

The Forfar Academy, now divided into higher and lower schools, commenced its instructive course in 1815, and there are five other public schools.

There are also a Poorhouse and an Infirmary for the benefit of the town and the neighbouring parish; the former contains 85 beds and the latter 40.

In 1850 a public cemetery was formed; it occupies 9 Scotch acres on the south side of the town, and is laid out in tasteful walks, with ornamental shrubs &c. forming a pleasant promenade. On a mound at the top of the cemetery, which occupies one of those gently sloping hills for which this part of the country is so noted, a fine monument was erected in 1852, by public subscription, to the memory of the second Sir Robert Peel, the statesman, who died in 1850. The figure stands upon the centre of a large pedestal, covered by a dome, which is supported on eight pillars. From its site the town and surrounding district may be seen to great advantage, while the monument is observable on its elevated position at a considerable distance.

Finavon, about 6 miles distant, is the residence of Lt.-Col. Charles Greenhill-Gardyne D.L., J.P. Major P. A. W. Carnegy is the principal landowner.

The population of the royal burgh in 1891 was 12,769, in 1881, 13,579; rateable value, £39,407.

The parish comprises 8,363 acres, and the rateable value is £52,841, including the value of the burgh, as given above, of the total £47,797 is general heritages and £5,044 for railways. The population of the parish was in 1891, 13,665, and in 1881, 14,470.

FRIOCKHEIM is a village in the parish of Kirkden, small debt court district of Arbroath, from which town it is distant 6 miles in a north-westerly direction, being 10 south-west from Montrose; it stands in a flat agricultural district and has a station on the Dundee, Arbroath and Forfar joint Caledonian and North British railway; it is a modern village laid out according to a regular plan, and was founded by the late Mr. Anderson, who feued it in small lots. The name, a combination of Scandinavian and German, means "happy home." There are three churches: Established, Free and Evangelical Union; the first, a building of stone, with a good steeple containing a clock with two dials, presented by the present heritor, George Gordon esq. of Melbourne. The chief trade of the place is bleaching of yarns and turning bobbins for the Arbroath and Dundee factories; there are also some paving stone quarries (in which stone-dressing machinery was first used). Fairs are held for cattle and hiring on 26th May or first Thursday after, 20th July or first Monday after, and 28th November or first Thursday after. The population of the ecclesiastical parish was in 1891, 1,265, and of the village, 943 in 1891, and 1,098 in 1881.

GLAMIS.

GLAMIS (or Glammis) is a parish 5 miles from north to south by 4 broad, bounded on the south by Auchterhouse, south-east and east by Tealing, north-east by Kinnettles, north by Kirriemuir, north-west by Airlie and west by Eassie and Nevay; it is in the small debt court district of Forfar, from which town the kirktown of Glamis is distant 6 miles south-west, the station, on the Newtyle and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, being 1½ miles distant from Glamis and Newtyle, 6 miles south-west. The river Dean runs along the parish through the Glen of Strathmore. In a park of 160 acres, a little north of the village, stands Glamis Castle, the seat of the Earls of Strathmore; it is an ancient building clustered round a massive tower 100 feet in height, with angle turrets and a newel stair which leads to the roof; the house has a fine hall and a private chapel, with good paintings: it was a royal residence, and the scene of the death of Malcolm II. in 1034; it afterwards became the property of Macbeth, after whose death it fell to the crown: Robert II. gave it to John Lyon, his favourite, who, on marrying the king's second daughter, became the founder of the family of Lyon (now Bowes-Lyon), Earls of Strathmore, the eldest son of which bears the courtesy title of Lord Glamis: on the conviction and execution of the young and beautiful Lady Glamis for witchcraft, in 1537, the castle once more became royal property, and a residence of James V., but was afterwards restored to the family: it contains a valuable collection of pictures. Near the castle stands a remarkable curiosity, namely, a great number of dials, thus disposed—on a pedestal stand the figures of four lions rampant, life size, each holding a dial in their fore paws, facing the cardinal points; from their heads rise a huge mass of stone, something like a pineapple in shape, with the protuberances upon it formed into dials, making the number of these ancient timepieces eighty-four. In the manse garden stands a large stone obelisk, with carvings said to mark Malcolm's grave. In the village is a Masonic Hall, which is also used for lectures and other purposes. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in April, first Wednesday in May, first Wednesday after the 26th of May, first Saturday after the 28th of October and first Wednesday after the 22nd of November. The Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne is the principal landowner. The area comprises 14,347 acres; rateable value, £11,702; the population in 1891 was 1,464, and in 1881, 1631.

Charleston is a small village in the parish. Charleston and Glen Ogilvie abound with very valuable stone.

GLENISLA is a parish in the north-west of the county, extending 20 miles from north to south and about 6 in breadth; it is bounded on the west and south-west by Perthshire and on the east by the parishes of Cortachy, Kirriemuir and Lintrathen. The river Isla flows down the centre of the parish, and the kirktown stands on the left bank of this river, 8 miles north from Alyth. The parish is in the poor combination of Dundee and small debt court district of Forfar. The district is mountainous, and in the northern portion contains the large deer forest of Caanlochan, near Fulchan. About 4 miles north-west of the village are the ruins of Forten Castle, belonging to the Ogilvies, and destroyed by Argyll in 1640. A market is held on the Thursday before the last Wednesday in September. The Earl of Airlie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 41,242 acres; rateable value, £9,533; the population in 1891 was 676, and in 1881, 791.

INVERKEILOR is a parish with a sea front of about 5 miles on Lunan Bay, and bounded north by the parishes of Lunan and Kinnell, west by Kirkden and Carmyllie and south by St. Vigeans; it runs inland for about 7 miles, and its kirktown is 5½ miles north of Arbroath; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, and has a station on the Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway. The Lunan water runs through the northern part of the parish, and the Keilor burn through the south-eastern. On an eminence at the mouth of the Lunan river stands a venerable ruin, called "Red Castle," said to have been built by William the Lion, and used by him as a hunting seat. A short way to the south is the promontory of Redhead. The ridge of the coast at this point is very rocky and precipitous, about 200 feet above the sea level, and continues gradually rising in a southerly direction. South-west of Redhead is Ethie House, the seat of the Earl of Northesk, and the residence at one time of Cardinal Beaton. About a mile from Ethie House, eastward, near the sea, stand the remains of St. Murdoch's chapel, formerly a cell of Aberbrothock. Henry Alexander F. Lindsay-Carnegie esq. J.P. of Kinblethmont; the Earl of Dalhousie, of Brechin Castle; the Earl of Northesk, of Ethie House; Lieut.-Col. Arthur J. Rait C.B., J.P., D.L. of Anniston House, and Alexander Balfour esq. J.P. of Inchock, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,240 acres; rateable value, £15,594; population in 1891 was 1,531, and in 1881, 1,671.

KINNELL is a parish, with its kirktown 1½ miles from Friockheim station on the Dundee and Forfar joint line of the Caledonian and North British companies, and 6 miles north-west of Arbroath, on the bank of the Lunan river, and is bounded north by Craig parish, east and south by Lunan and Inverkeilor and west by Kirkden and Aberlemno; it extends 3 miles from north to south, by 5 miles broad, and is in the small debt court district of Brechin. Within the parish are several tumuli; and tradition points out the spot where a battle was fought between the rival clans of Lindsay and Ogilvie, in the year 1443. The surface of this district is mostly flat, and in a good state of cultivation; and there are some plantations in a thriving condition. The Earl of Southesk and the Earl of Dalhousie are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,577 acres; rateable value, £7,573; the population in 1891 was 643, and in 1881, 696.

KIRRIEMUIR.

KIRRIEMUIR is a town of considerable antiquity, a burgh of barony, police burgh, and capital of its parish, 62 miles north from Edinburgh, 18 north from Dundee, 6 west-north-west from Forfar and 5 north from Glamis; it has a station, the terminus of a branch line of the Caledonian railway running from Forfar to Kirriemuir. The town is situated near the foot of the braes of Angus, on the south-west side of the hill, along the northern brow of a glen, through which flows the Gairie burn. The prospect from the lower part of the town is bounded by the southern braes of the glen, but from the higher part almost the whole of the Vale of Strathmore is visible. The town has a police commission, consisting of a provost, two bailies and nine commissioners; a justice of peace court is held when required, and a sheriff's court six times a year, for recovery of small debts. The date of the barony of Kirriemuir is unknown, and it is only certain that the jurisdiction of its bailie once extended over a large tract of country. The Earl of Home is superior of the burgh. For a long period Kirriemuir has been the seat of considerable manufactures, comprising about twenty varieties of linen, and it is celebrated for the excellent fabric. Some idea may be formed of the importance of this trade from the fact that the looms of Kirriemuir have furnished in one year upwards of 100,000 pieces, varying from 100 to 170 yards, giving employment to 1,500 persons. There are four banking establishments, branches respectively of the British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Bank of Scotland. There are several good hotels. The library belonging to the Young Men's Christian Association is open to the public; it contains about 3,000 volumes. There are places of worship for the Established Church, Free Church, United Presbyterians, Original Seceders and Episcopalians. Besides the Board Schools there is a seminary, erected and endowed from a bequest made in 1829 by Mr. John Webster, writer and banker, with which there is a handsome bursary connected, now transferred to the School Board, and the money used for higher grade education. One newspaper, "The Kirriemuir Free Press," is published weekly on Fridays. A little to the east of the town is the cemetery, situated on the sloping side of an eminence. Three miles to the north-east, within the boundary of the parish, over the small river Carity, stands the Castle of Inverquarity, formerly a stronghold of the Ogilvies; it is a large Gothic edifice, in a state of good preservation; and 2 miles west are the ruins of Castle Balfour, erected by Cardinal Beaton. The principal seats are Kinnordy, the residence of Sir Leonard Lyell bart J.P., M.P.; Logie, the residence of Colonel Alex. Angus Airlie Kinloch C.B. and Shielhill, the residence of Miss Lyell. The weekly market is held on Friday, and there is a monthly cattle market; and fairs on the second Wednesday after the 26th May, the 24th July or the Wednesday after, the 19th October or the Wednesday after, the second Wednesday after the 22nd November, and on the first Friday after the 26th of May and the 22nd November. Sir Leonard Lyell bart. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish (now reduced by transfer of 20,573 acres to Cortachy and Clova parish) comprises 15,027 acres; rateable value, £24,730; the population in 1891 was 6,090, and in 1881, 6,616, of whom 4,179 were within the burgh in 1891, and 4,390 in 1881.

LIFF, BENVIE and INVERGOWRIE form a united parish, in which a portion of the city of Dundee is situated, and the landward portion lies to the west of that city, the kirktown of Liff lying 4 miles north-west; the parish is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and contains the villages of Liff, Birkhill, Muirhead and Lochee and part of Invergowrie, which see. The Dundee and Newtyle section of the Caledonian railway runs through the parish, and has stations at Liff, Camperdown and Lochee. The Dundee Royal Lunatic Asylum is at West Green, near the western boundary of the parish. At Bullionfield, in the parish of Liff, is a paper mill. Freestone, belonging to the old red sandstone formation, is found and extensively quarried in various parts of the parish. The Earl of Camperdown and J. Martin Whyte esq. of Balruddery, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,086 acres; rateable value, £16,550; the population in 1891 of the landward portion of the parish (excluding Dundee city) was 1,800, and in 1881, 1,319.

Birkhill and Muirhead are small villages in the united parish of Liff and Benvie, situated on the Coupar-Angus road, and distant respectively 2 and 3 miles from Lochee, and 4 and 5 from Dundee, their post town. At Muirhead is a Free church and a Board school.

Post Office, Lochee; John Grant, sub-postmaster. Letters through Dundee. Delivered at 8.30 a.m.; dispatched at 12.30 p.m

LINTRATHEN is a parish about 11 miles in extent from south to north and broad, and is situated in the district known as the Braes of Angus, which lies between the Grampian range and the valley of Strathmore; its boundaries are Cortachy on the north and east, Kingoldrum and Airlie on the south-east and south and Glenisla on the west; it is in the small debt court district of Kirriemuir, and contains the hamlets of Pitmudie and Bridgend of Lintrathen, the latter containing the church, and distant 12 miles north-west from Forfar and 7 south-west from Kirriemuir railway station. The loch from which the town of Dundee is supplied, adjoins the village of Lintrathen at Bridgend. The streams which intersect the parish are the Melgum and the Isla, the latter dividing the parish on the west side from Glenisla, and on which there are two beautiful waterfalls, the Reeky Linn and the Slug of Achrannie, from the former of which arose the name of Lintrathen. The Earl of Airlie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 22,624 acres; rateable value, £11,941; the population in 1891 was 558, and in 1881, 641.

Post Office; Thomas Craik, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Kirriemuir at 9.45 a.m. & are dispatched thereto at 2 p.m. The nearest telegraph office is at Kilry & the nearest money order office & savings bank at Kirriemuir. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid

LOCHEE, see DUNDEE.

LOCHLEE is a parish occupying the northern border of the county and extending 9 miles from north to south by 13 broad; it is bounded on the west and north by the county of Aberdeen, east by the parish of Edzell and south by Lethnot and Cortachy, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin, at which town is the nearest railway station, 10 miles from the nearest point of the parish, which is situated among the Grampians, a mountainous district, chiefly adapted for pasture, and bordering on the counties of Kincardine and Aberdeen. Some of the hills of this district vary from 2,000 to 3,000 feet above the sea level. The soil is light, and the crops are very remunerative. Here is some of the finest scenery in Scotland. The parish receives its name through the loch so named. The principal streams which rise and traverse the parish are the Lee, Mark and the Tarff, tributaries of the North Esk, which enters the sea near Montrose. The parish church is at the west end of the parish, and there are likewise an Episcopal church, a Free church and a Board school. This district was once the property of the Lindsays of Glen Esk. Invermark is the residence of Lord Hindlip. The Earl of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 58,382 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 343, and in 1881, 359.

Post Office; James Watt, postmaster. Letters through Brechin. Delivery, 3.30 p.m.; dispatch, 7.30 a.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Edzell, open 7 a.m. to 8 p.m

LUNDIE and FOWLIS is a joint parish formed by the addition of Easter Fowlis to Lundie, in 1618, and is partly in Forfarshire and partly in Perthshire, its boundaries in the former county are Lun and Benvie on the south-east and Auchterhouse on the north-east, Newtyle on the north and Kettins on the west; it is in the poor combination of Dundee, from which city the village of Lundie is distant 8 miles north-west, and small debt court district of Forfar. The nearest railway station is at Auchterhouse, on the Dundee and Newtyle line. In the churchyard of Lundie lie the remains of Admiral Lord Duncan. This church was recently restored, together with that of Fowlis, which was originally a Collegiate church, founded in 1149 by Sir Andrew Gray for a provost and prebendaries. The Earl of Camperdown is the principal landowner. The area of the parish in Forfarshire comprises 4,188 acres and had a population in 1891 of 301. The entire parish comprises 7,012 acres; rateable value, £3,299; population in 1891, 584, and in 1881, 628.

MAINS and STRATHMARTINE form a joint parish, with stations at Baldovan and Baldragon, on the Dundee and Newtyle section of the Caledonian railway, 3 miles north of Dundee, intersected by the river Dighty, from which Mains took its original name of Strathdighty, and extending 3 miles from north to south by 5½ from west to east; it is bounded by the parishes of Liff and Dundee on the south, Murroes on the east, Tealing on the north and Auchterhouse on the west; it is in the Dundee small debt court district. There are several mills along the Dighty, and on the north the bleach ground of Claverhouse; while freestone quarries afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The celebrated Viscount Dundee took his lairdship title of Claverhouse from a place in this parish. Downfield, a village in this parish, has in recent years greatly extended, and is now regarded as a suburb of Dundee, from which it is distant about 2½ miles. An asylum for the treatment of imbecile and idiot children was founded at Baldovan, near Downfield, in 1853, by Lady Jane Ogilvy, and the Dundee Industrial Schools are in the same place, together with an Orphan Asylum. Sir Reginald Ogilvy bart. of Baldovan; John Sharp esq. of Balmuir; James Erskine Erskine esq. of Linlathen, and the Trustees of the late Thomas Cox esq. of Strathmartine, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,301 acres; rateable value, £33,249; the population in 1891 was 3,998, and in 1881, 3,490.

MONIFIETH is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Tay, extending about 4½ miles from north to south with a breadth of 1½ to 3½ miles; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and contains a large portion of the town and police burgh of Broughty Ferry and the newly made police burgh of Monifieth; it is bounded on the south by the Firth of Tay, and on the east by the parishes of Barry and Monikie, on the north by Monikie and on the west by Murroes and Dundee. The name is understood to be derived from the Gaelic appellation of "Monifuith" or the "stag moss." The Caledonian and North British railways have stations at Broughty Ferry, Monifieth and Kingennie, on the Forfar and Arbroath line. The village of Monifieth, situated about 2 miles east from Broughty Ferry, on a brae with a southern exposure, and within a short distance of the sea, has recently been made a police burgh, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners; it contains a number of private residences, a machine works and a large jute spinning mill. Seaview is the residence of James F. Low esq. J.P. and Ashludie, that of Alex. Gordon esq. J.P. James Erskine Erskine esq. J.P. of Linlathen; Robert Arklay Fergusson esq. of Ethiebeaton, and David Anderson esq. of The Grange, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,952 acres; rateable value, £60,772; the population in 1891 was 10,508, of which 7,612 were in the police burgh of Broughty Ferry and 1,835 in the police burgh of Monifieth; in 1881 the figures were 9,514, 6,470 and 1,569 respectively.

MONIKIE is a parish, containing the village of Newbigging and the hamlets of Monikie and Craigton, the former 10 miles north-east from Dundee; it has a station on the Dundee and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, and extends 7 miles from north to south by 5 in breadth; the parish is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and is bounded south-east by Barry, south-west by Monifieth, west by Murroes, north-west by Inverarity, Panbride on the east, and north and north-east by Carmyllie and Guthrie. There are quarries of freestone, flagstones and whinstone in the parish. About half a mile south of the parish church, on the hill of Downie, stands a monument 105 feet in height, erected in 1839, during the lifetime of the late Lord Panmure, by his tenantry. The Trustees of the Earl of Dalhousie, the Earl of Home, the Trustees of the late John Shiell esq. and the Trustees of the late Robert Sim esq. M.D. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 8,921 acres; rateable value, £18,671; the population in 1891 was 1,328, and in 1881, 1,412.

MONTROSE.

MONTROSE is a royal burgh and seaport, the capital of the parish, and a branch station of the Scottish North-Eastern section of the Caledonian railway, 72 miles N.N.E. from Edinburgh, 29 N.E. from Dundee, 23 S.S.W. from Stonehaven, 21 E. by N. from Forfar, 13 S.S.W. from Bervie, 12 N. from Arbroath and 8½ E. from Brechin. Montrose is also an intermediate station on the North British East Coast railway system, a route which considerably lessens the distance to the south. The German Ocean, the rivers North Esk and South Esk, and a large expanse of water, 9 miles in circumference, and filled by the tide at high water, designated "Montrose Basin," constitute the site of the town a peninsula. It was anciently called "Celurca," but the derivation of its modern appellation, Montrose, has been controverted by etymologists. Camden derives the name from the Latin "Mons Rosarum," the "Mount of Roses," which is countenanced by the seal of the town bearing the ornament of roses, with the motto "Mare ditat, Rosa decorat"—"the sea enriches, and the rose adorns," with two mermaids as supporters. Montrose is connected with many important events: in 980 the town was burned by the Danes, and many of its inhabitants killed. It is mentioned as the port from which Sir Jas. Douglas embarked, in 1330, with a numerous and splendid retinue, on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, taking with him the heart of Robert Bruce. It also frequently appears in history in connection with the wars of the Covenanters, and was sacked by the Royalists under Irvine of Drum in 1644. During the rebellions of 1715 and 1745 it was the head quarters of the rebels in Angus, and at its Mercat Cross the Chevalier was proclaimed by the Earl of Southesk in 1715. This was the first port made by the French fleet in December, 1715, with the Chevalier on board; and the Prince embarked at the same place in the month of February of the following year, accompanied by the Earl of Mar, Earl of Melfort, Lord John Drummond, Lieut.-General Sheldon and a number of other gentlemen. It is distinguished as the first place in Scotland where the Greek language was taught, and as having sent forth from its seminary the celebrated scholar Andrew Melville; it was the birthplace of the warlike Marquess of Montrose, and the house in which he was born, although considerably altered, still stands, and was for some years occupied as an inn. In the same house the old Pretender spent his last night in Scotland. Part of it is still used as a private dwelling-house, and is known as the Castlestede. This town is also celebrated as the birth-place of Joseph Hume, the distinguished statesman, who represented Montrose for a number of years in the British Parliament, and to whose memory a monument has been raised in High street; in the same street is a statue of the 2nd Sir Robert Peel. Robert Brown, the eminent botanist; the late Paul Chalmers, artist; Sir James Duke, Lord Mayor of London; Burnes, the diplomatist, massacred at Cabul; Sir William Burnett, of the Royal Navy; Dr. Wm. Hunter, the learned Orientalist, and a host of other celebrities were all natives of the burgh. Montrose formerly bestowed the title of duke on the chief of the Crawford family; but this having been cancelled in the reign of James IV., another title was created and bestowed on the family of Graham, who derived their title from their lands at Alt or Upper Montrose, now commonly called Old Montrose, but they do not now own land in the parish from which they take their title, although their name still lingers in the parish, part of the lands being called Graham's firth.

The High street of Montrose is of great width, and the houses are lofty. This great width has been obtained by the removal in 1736 of a row of old thatched houses, which extended from the North fort to the Castle gait. Not only are the main streets strikingly clean, but the secondary ones also. About the centre of the High street is the Town House, a plain building of two storeys, with an arcade below, erected in 1763, and Guildhall, erected in 1819. Passage across the river in olden times was obtained by a ferry boat, which plied between Ferryden and the ferry boatness. This ferry boat is still continued, but the traffic was greatly diverted by a timber bridge erected in 1791 between the island of Inchbraoch and the Constable hill. This bridge was pulled down in 1827, and the South Esk is now crossed by a fine suspension bridge, the foundation stone of which was laid Sept. 1828, and the bridge declared open in 1829. The design was by Capt. Brown R.N. patentee, and it was finished at an expense of upwards of £20,000. It crosses the river in a noble span, the distance between the points of suspension being 432 feet, and, with its approaches, the structure extends 800 feet. Bridge street forms a handsome approach to it. The river at the bridge is very deep, having 35 feet of water at spring tides and 20 feet at low water in ordinary tides, and during the ebb it frequently runs at the rate of six miles an hour. The harbour, formed by the river and an arm of the sea, is very commodious and a safe asylum for vessels. Two light-houses on the north bank of the South Esk mark the entrance of the river, while a tower, called the Scurdyness, on the rock at the south entrance has another of the lights on the east coast. A house, in which the keeper resides, is provided with accommodation for the reception and recovery of persons who have suffered shipwreck, and attached are two lifeboats. The quays, which are all on the Montrose side of the river, are judiciously planned, and have been considerably extended of late. There is a custom house at the port, but on account of recent changes it is now only a branch under the Dundee district. There is also a wet dock and patent slip. In 1893 the Corporation purchased the island of Inchbraoch, in the middle of the river South Esk; this is in the parish of Craig, but is included in the parliamentary and municipal boundary of the burgh. There are two or three farms on the island, and the Council have prepared a feuing plan, the grounds of which when let will considerably increase the income from the island. Two railway companies run into Montrose, having their own goods and passenger depots, viz., the Caledonian and North British. The shipping trade includes flax, corn, timber, coal and cured fish. The principal manufactures comprise flax and jute spinning, linen yarns and sail cloth, but there are various other branches of trading industry, notably fish curing, carried on by Messrs. Joseph Johnston and Sons, who are also the lessees of the salmon fishings on the seaboard. The extent of the wood trade at this port deserves special mention, as it is believed to be second only to that of Greenock. It is in the hands of the old and enterprising firm of Messrs. Robert Millar and Sons, who export large quantities of dressed timber to Australia, &c. A company has been formed for shipbuilding and engineering. There are seven branch banks and a savings bank. Several inns afford accommodation to visitors, the principal being the Star and the Central. The Star hotel has been long established, and in all respects affords excellent accommodation. The Queen's Temperance is also a good commercial and family hotel, centrally situated. The Central is large and newly built, and commands extensive views of the sea coast and surrounding country. The Downs or Links are situated between the town and the sea, and are the most extensive of any in Scotland. Three well laid out golf courses, comprehending a circuit of several miles, finely formed by nature and free to the public at all times for the favourite and healthful Scottish game of golf and the popular game of cricket, both of which are much practised. The railway passing through the Links has a little curtailed their dimensions, but a large portion of the front Links has been tastefully laid out as public gardens with promenades, a bowling green and fountains, which has earned for the town the distinction of being "the Rose of Scotland." Montrose has its assembly room and other places of amusement, and numerous institutions—charitable, educational, scientific and social. Two admirably conducted newspapers issue weekly from the Montrose press—the "Review," Liberal, and the "Standard," Conservative. There are also two gratis papers with a large circulation, and named the "Courant" and the "Montrose Chronicle."

The erection of Montrose into a royal burgh has generally been referred to the year 1352, in the reign of David II. but there is good reason for believing that the first charter emanated from David I. The municipal government is vested in the provost, three magistrates, dean of guild, hospital master, treasurer and 12 councillors. The town is protected by a body of police, under the superintendence of commissioners. A police court is held when requisite, a justice of the peace court on the first Monday in each month, and a sheriff court on the third Friday in the months of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims. The burgh is united with those of Forfar, Brechin, Arbroath and Bervie, usually called the Montrose Burghs, in returning one member to Parliament. There are two volunteer corps, viz. artillery and rifles. The parish church is a large building, and was founded in 1791. This church has two galleries, and is capable of holding 2,500 people; the tower is lofty, surmounted by a spire, reaching to a height of 220 feet. A full account of the church, its clergy, associations and traditions is to be found in the "Memorials of the Church of St. John," published in 1891. In addition to the parish church proper, there is the Melville parish church, three Free churches, three United Presbyterian churches, an English Episcopal, a Scotch Episcopal, Catholic, and others for various denominations. The public charities of Montrose are very numerous, the principal being John Erskine's, of Jamaica, left in 1786 £3,000 to be invested in land, and the interest applied to the grammar school, and since 1888 it has been under the management of the Educational Endowment Trust. Among these are the ancient Hospital Fund, under the guardianship of the Town Council. The relief from this charity is distributed among about 144 persons, not paupers. The Royal Lunatic Asylum, incorporated by Royal Charter in 1810, the first institution of the kind in Scotland, the original building having been erected in 1781, occupies a site at Sunnyside, about a mile and a half from the town, and from which there is an extensive prospect. The buildings consist of the main block, opened in 1859, for between 400 and 500 patients. Store rooms and a new laundry were built in 1877, and in 1882 a spacious dining-room and recreation hall were erected. The foundation stone of an hospital for the sick and infirm insane was laid in 1888, and opened for the reception of patients in 1891. It accommodates over 100 patients. The villa of Ravenswood, Hillside, is occupied by high-class lady patients, and the managers are about to erect a building capable of accommodating 60 private patients, on a site to the north-east of the main block. An Infirmary and Dispensary, originally incorporated with the lunatic asylum, and situated in Bridge street, was opened in 1839. It is still under the charge of the managers of the asylum. The Academy is a handsome erection, surmounted by a dome, and the establishment comprises a rector and six teachers in the various languages, writing and arithmetic, English grammar &c. Many other educational establishments are supported, and numerous societies, both religious and benevolent, are maintained in the town. Several libraries and reading rooms are supported, the principal, instituted in 1737, being the one in a part of the Town House, reckoned to be the finest and most extensive this side the Firth of Forth. An interesting museum, instituted in 1837, is maintained in a tasteful building in Museum street. The market is held on Friday, and hiring fairs are held on the Friday after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas. The parish of Montrose encloses an area of 4,134 acres. The population of the burgh in 1871 was 15,720, and in 1881, 16,245; but in 1891 it had fallen to 14,428. On account of the continued depression in local trade (1895) the population remains about stationary.

At Dubton is the junction station for Montrose, on the Scottish North-Eastern section of the Caledonian railway.

Hillside, which forms a suburb and is in the parish of Montrose, about 2 miles therefrom, is tastefully laid out, and there are many very good houses occupied by retired and business people of Montrose. The North British railway has a station here, to the north of which is the lunatic asylum, previously mentioned. Population, 1,576.

NEWTYLE is a parish and village, the latter on the road from Dundee to Meigle (in Perthshire), 11 miles north-west from the former town and 2½ south from the latter; it has a station on the Dundee, Newtyle and Coupar-Angus section of the Caledonian railway, with a branch line to Alyth Junction, and thence to Alyth; the parish extends 2 miles from north to south by 3½ in breadth, and is bounded north by Eassie and Nevay, west by Perthshire, south by Kettins and Lundie and east by Auchterhouse, and is in the poor combination of Dundee and in the small debt court division of Forfar. In 1872 a church of the Establishment was erected upon the site of the old one, at a cost of £3,000, and affords 600 sittings; it is in the Transition Norman style, with a tower 83 feet in height, containing a two-dial clock, presented by Capt. D. C. Burman. There are also a Free church, a Board school and a public library in the village. Near the village are the remains of the castle of Hatton, built by Lawrence, Lord Oliphant, in the year 1575; and contiguous to these ruins some vestiges are visible of the still more ancient castle of Balcraig. The Earl of Wharncliffe D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 5,192 acres; rateable value, £10 517; the population in 1891 was 833, and in 1881, 911.

PANBRIDE is a parish 5 miles south of Arbroath, on the coast of the North Sea, and contains a portion of the town and police burgh of Carnoustie, besides the villages of Panbride, Newton, Muirdrum and East & West Haven, having stations on the Dundee, Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway at Carnoustie and at East Haven; the parish extends 4½ miles from south-east to north-west by 2 in breadth, and is bounded on the south and south-west by Barry and Monikie, north by Carmyllie and north-east by Arbirlot; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath. The Monikie burn runs through two-thirds of the length of the parish. At Panmure is a stone said to mark the grave of a Danish chieftain. The inhabitants are principally engaged in fishing and agricultural pursuits. The village of Muirdrum is in this parish, and lies about 1½ miles north of Carnoustie; the Earl of Dalhousie is proprietor; it contains a Board school and a Post Office. There are also in the parish the villages of Westhaven and Newton of Panbride, both forming part of Carnoustie, from which it is divided by the Lochty burn. A mile further to the east are the Panbride Bleach Works, belonging to Mr. J. F. Dickson. At the fishing villages of East and West Haven are two open harbours. Panmure House, a seat of the Earl of Dalhousie, is a fine mansion, the prominent feature of which is a tower 80 feet high, with angle turrets, built in 1852; a large well-wooded park surrounds the house. The Earl of Dalhousie, the Trustees of the late James Walker, of Ravensby, and Robert Milne esq. of Woodhill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,199 acres; rateable value, landwards, including villages, £14,684; the population in 1891 was 1,625, and in 1881, 1,395; the numbers in the police burgh of Carnoustie being 909 in 1891, and 593 in 1881.

TEALING is a parish lying east of the Sidlaw range of hills, with its kirktown 5 miles north of Dundee; it extends 5 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 1 to 3 miles, and is bounded north and north-east by Inverarity, east by Murroes, south by Mains and Strathmartine and west by Auchterhouse and Glamis; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee. In this parish are found grey slate, moorstone and freestone. John Glass, founder of the sect designated "Glassites," was minister of Tealing anterior to his open separation from the Church of Scotland. Tealing House is the residence of Miss Fothringham. The Earl of Home and Walter T. J. Scrymsoure Steuart Fothringham esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,227 acres; rateable value, £6,259; the population in 1891 was 649, and in 1881, 757.

GALLOWAY.

THIS is an ancient district in the south-west of Scotland, including the present counties of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown. The family of Stewart, Earls of Galloway and Barons Garlies, take their title from this district, and it also gives a name to the second diocese in the united diocese of Glasgow and Galloway.

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LOTHIAN, lies on the southern side of the entrance to the Firth of Forth, its north-western border being bounded by that estuary and its north-eastern by the North Sea, its northern angle lying due south from Crail and Fifeness, on the opposite shore of the Frith, Berwickshire bounding it on the south and Edinburghshire on the west. From east to west it extends 26 miles; from north to south, at the middle, 16; at the east end it is not more than 10 miles across, and at the west end about 12; its area is 271 square miles, or 173,447 statute acres. The population in 1831 consisted of 18,231 males and 19,254 females; total, 37,485, and in 1881, of 38,502 persons; the number of inhabited houses in 1891 was 8,005, and in 1881, 8,122. In extent this is the twenty-fifth, and in population the twentieth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—Forming part of the Pictish kingdom in 81, it fell under the dominions of the Romans, and for nearly 3½ centuries formed part of their province of Valentia, until 410, when the Romans quitted the country, their departure being followed by a century of war, at the close of which, in 547, Ida, a Northman, managed to concentrate all the country from the Tees to the Forth under his sway; his grandson, Aethelfrith, was slain by Eadwine, Prince of Deira (or the country between the Tees and Humber), who then formed from these provinces the kingdom of Northumbria, bounded on the south by the Humber and north by the Forth, which continued as an appanage of England under kings or earls until 1057, when the portion north of the Tweed was incorporated into the kingdom of Scotland under Malcolm II. This county, with Edinburghshire, Linlithgow, and parts of Stirling and Roxburghshire, formed the district known as Lothean or Loudian, which suffered severely from English forays, notably those under Edward I., 1296; Edward II., previous to Bannockburn; Edward III., 1356; Richard II., 1385. Bothwell owned its strongest fortress, Dunbar, and thither he brought Queen Mary in 1567; Cromwell also concentrated his army at Dunbar in 1650, to be near his supplies, and at Doonhill defeated Major-General David Leslie; in 1745, when Prince Charles Edward, out-flanking and out-marching General Cope, entered the capital, Cope brought his forces by sea to Dunbar, and on the morning of the 22 September lay encamped on the level ground near the shore by Bankton House, in the parish of Prestonpans, when in the misty morning the small Highland army appeared on the hills towards Tranent, and swooping down on the English sent Cope to carry the news of his own defeat to the governor of Berwick. The old title of Earl of Dunbar is extinct, but those of Baron Blantyre, Earl of Haddington, and Baron Belhaven still remain.

Soil and Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—In point of soil, cultivation and produce, this county holds the first rank in Scotland, and in some of these respects, particularly the mode of husbandry, it will bear comparison with the most favoured districts in England. The principal elevations in Haddingtonshire above the level of the sea are Traprain Law, 724 feet; North Berwick Law, 612 feet; Soutra Hill, 1,209 feet; Spartleton Hill, 1,534 feet; Gilston, 1,362 feet, and Mickle Says Law, 1,750 feet. The range of the Lammermuir hills occupy the south of the county, which may be divided into four districts. The northern is a sloping tract of land, with a fertile soil; south of this is a ridge of ground north of the Tyne, descending partly towards that river and partly towards the coast land, and comprehends a good proportion of the arable land of the county; the third tract is varying in breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the Lammermuir hills, nearly the whole extent of the county; the fourth comprises this extensive range of mountains, commencing at the south-west extremity of the shire and terminating on the Berwickshire coast, by the high promontory called St. Abb's Head; the greater part of this tract is moor, but between the hills are lands under a regular rotation of crops. Excellent gardens and orchards flourished in this county as early as the 12th century, and pulse seems to have been cultivated here in the 13th; the latter circumstance is attested by the fact of the English soldiers, during their siege of Dirleton Castle, having subsisted on the peas which grew in the adjacent fields. The fertility of East Lothian in the 17th century is ascertained by a passage in "Whitelock's Memoirs," where it is stated that the soldiers who accompanied Cromwell in his expedition into Scotland in 1650, were astonished to find in that district "the greatest plenty of corn they ever saw." The area under the chief crops in 1894 was—oats, 18,389 acres; barley, 15,367; turnips, 16,776; hay, 11,529; potatoes, 7,269; wheat, 5,492; the total corn crops being 39,899 acres and total green crops, 24,978; land under grass is 27,588 acres, and permanent pasture 18,912 acres. Total area of land and water being 171,106 acres; mountain and heath land and woods occupying 48,082 acres. The live stock in 1894 consisted of horses, 3,749; cattle, 10,103; sheep, 127,406 and pigs, 1,792. The manufactures of this county are unimportant, and are carried on but to a limited extent; there are two woollen mills in the neighbourhood of the county town, whilst in other parts of the shire are brick and fireclay the works, agricultural implement works, breweries and a distillery. Salt is manufactured in the vicinity of Prestonpans, coal also being wrought here and at Tranent, Ormiston and Pencaitland. So long ago as 1200, it is said, the monks of Newbattle worked a seam of this mineral at Prestongrange. Limestone is common over the county, and clay, ironstone and sandstone are also found. The climate in the Lowlands is on the whole genial and favourable for agriculture, whilst in the Lammermoor district it is colder and more liable to falls of rain and snow. The production of coal in the county in 1894 was 248,334 tons, value £80,709, and of fireclay, 2,764 tons, value £449.

Rivers &c.—Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing from Ormiston on the south-west by Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynninghame, where it forms a bay; the White Adder, Monynut and Eye rivers, take their rise in the south of the county. The only railway in the county is the North British, which, entering the county a little north-west of Cockburnspath, runs close to the coast as far as Dunbar, thence turning westward it proceeds through Prestonkirk to Drem, where a branch goes north to North Berwick, and running to Longniddry, it sends another branch south-east to Haddington and passes out of the county near Inveresk, from which place a branch passes through Ormiston to Macmerry. The southern portion of the county does not possess any railways.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Haddingtonshire comprises 23 complete civil parishes and two parts of parishes and has 25 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of two others, the whole being included in the presbyteries of Haddington, Dunbar and Dalkeith, in the synod of Lothian: Haddington, Dunbar and North Berwick are royal burghs; these, with Lauder (in Berwickshire) and Jedburgh (in Roxburghshire), formerly joined in sending one member to Parliament, but by the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, were included in their respective shires. The county at large returns one representative. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 numbered 6,320. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was £247,434; railways, £18,596.

ABERLADY is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, east by Haddington, south by Gladsmuir and west by the Firth of Forth; the village, which lies on the south side of Aberlady Bay, is 3 miles west from Drem station on the Berwick and Edinburgh section of the North British railway, and 15 east from Edinburgh. James VI. by charter, erected this parish into a temporal barony, which grant, it is said, was confirmed by Charles I. in 1663, but the privileges or immunities conferred thereby are now in abeyance. Bishop Gavin Douglas, of Dunkeld (d. 1522), granted to this parish the estate of Kilspindie, and the ruins of the house attached to it are still to be seen. There is a fine old market cross. About half a mile distant on the north-east, is Luffness House, a mansion belonging to H. W. Hope esq. built in 1549, as a fortification, by the French general, De Thermes, as a protection against the garrison of Haddington, then in the possession of the English; near by stand the ruins of a Carmelite monastery founded by Patrick, 8th Earl of Dunbar, 1286. The Earl of Wemyss and March is patron of the parish; the seat of this nobleman, Gosford House, which stands nearly a mile south-west of the village, is surrounded by fine grounds, and contains a valuable collection of paintings. The area comprises 4,341 acres; rateable value, £10,560; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,063, including 505 in the village, and in 1881, 1,000, with 441 in the village.

ATHELSTANEFORD is a parish and village in the East Lothian poor combination, and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, south and west by Haddington, and south and east by Prestonkirk; the village lies 5½ miles south from North Berwick, and 2 south-west from Drem station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway; there is another station at East Fortune. The parish had for ministers successively, in the early part of the last century, two men of eminent poetical genius —Blair, author of "The Grave," and Home, author of "Douglas," to whose memory a monument has been erected in the centre of the village. The manse occupied by the first mentioned stood opposite the present modern manse, near the west end of the churchyard, and the site is now comprised in the garden, where an apple tree is pointed out as having stood close to the window of the poet's study. On the author of "Douglas" leaving his pastoral charge he retired to a mansion in the neighbourhood. The area comprises 5,077 acres; rateable value, £9,625; the population in 1891 was 741, and in 1881, 762.

Drem is a small village in this parish.

NORTH BERWICK is a seaport town, royal and police burgh and parish in the East Lothian poor combination; the town is the head of a sheriff district court, and up to 1885 was a parliamentary burgh, when the representation was merged into the county; the boundaries of the parish are Dirleton on the west, Prestonkirk on the south, Whitekirk on the south and east, and the Firth of Forth on the north, and here on a bay lies the town, 23 miles north-east from Edinburgh, with a terminal station on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. It consists principally of one long main street, running east and west, and another proceeding northward towards the sea, and on the East and West Links are some houses of a superior kind. The harbour, which is small, is formed by a tolerably good pier, and the rocks at the entrance cause only small vessels to enter; these can ride here in perfect safety, the harbour being boomed. The chief trade is the export of potatoes, and the imports are coal and bones for manure. The date of the first charter, erecting Berwick into a royal burgh, is unknown. James VI. granted to it a writ confirmatory of all its former privileges It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and six councillors. The sheriff's small debt court is held on the third Wednesday in January, and the second Wednesday in May, July and October, and the justice of peace courts when necessary. There are five churches and several good schools in the town. There are several first-class hotels here, the largest being the Marine, an edifice in the Scottish baronial style, erected in 1876. Fidra roads, about two miles to the west, are considered a very safe anchorage. In the offing are several bleak islets, only of value as rabbit warrens, and 3 miles to the east, within 2 miles of the coast, is the Bass Rock, which is a mile in circumference, and rises 350 feet above the surface of the sea; the channel betwixt it and the land is very deep, and is frequently taken by steam vessels. The Bass is inaccessible on all sides except by a narrow pass on the south-west, towards the land. A caverned passage penetrates through the rock from east to west, which may be explored at low water. Commanding the landing place are the remains of a small fortification, which at one time was of considerable strength, and could then only be reached by ladders, or a bucket and chain; it existed as a stronghold for a long period, was a state prison during the reign of the two Stuarts, and became distinguished in the early part of the reign of William III. for the persevering fortitude with which it held out against the new dynasty. The Bass is the resort of myriads of sea fowl, especially Solan geese. About 3 miles east of Berwick are the interesting ruins of Tantallan Castle, referred to by Sir Walter Scott as the parting scene of Angus and Marmion, in his poem of "Marmion." About a quarter of a mile south-west are the extensive remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by David I. for a sisterhood of Cistercian nuns; and directly south of the town rises North Berwick Law, a conical hill, the summit of which is 600 feet above the level of the sea. Sir Walter Hamilton Dalrymple bart. of the Lodge, and Sir George Grant Suttie bart. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,067 acres; rateable value, £21,951, including £12,847, the rateable value of the burgh of North Berwick; the population in 1891 was 3,038, including 2,376 in the town, 1,324 of whom formed the royal burgh, while the police burgh had 1,998; in 1881 the parish population was 2,688, and that of the town 1,698.

BOLTON is a parish and small village, the latter 3 miles south-west from Haddington, at which is the nearest railway station (North British branch from Longniddry); the parish, which is bounded north by Haddington, east by Yester, south by Humbie, and west by Salton, is in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington. The church and the public school are both in the village; the former is a substantial erection, in the modern Gothic style, with a square tower; there is also a Free church. About the close of the 15th century the lands of Bolton were seized by the Hepburns, one of whom, John Hepburn, was executed as the associate of the Earl of Bothwell, his chief in the murder of Darnley. The principal seat in the parish is Eaglescarnie, the residence of Alexander C. Stuart esq. J.P., D.L. The area comprises 3,106 acres; rateable value, £3,044; the population in 1891 was 271, and in 1881, 337.

The nearest Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office is at Haddington, 3 miles distant

COCKENZIE and PORT SETON.

Cockenzie is a fishing village and a quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Tranent, situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, and on the road to North Berwick, 1 mile north-east from Prestonpans station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. This place forms a police burgh conjointly with Port Seton, at which place a harbour, built at a cost of £11,000, mainly subscribed by the fishermen and aided by £2,000 from the late Earl of Wemyss and March, was opened in Sept. 1880, by Lady Elcho. The small harbour at Cockenzie, constructed by Mr. Cadell, is for shipping coal. The school and master's house were presented to the village. A fair is held here on the first Thursday in November. The principal landowners are the Earl of Wemyss and March and John Polson esq. Rateable value, £2,673; the population in 1891, including Port Seton, was 1,578, and in 1881, 1,612; in 1891 the ecclesiastical parish had a population of 1,716.

DIRLETON is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of North Berwick. The parish is in the north-western extremity of the county, on the shore of the Firth of Forth, North Berwick lying to the east and Aberlady and Athelstaneford to the south, 20 miles east-north-east from Edinburgh, 7 north from Haddington, 4½ north-east from Aberlady, and nearly 3 south-west from North Berwick, with a station about a mile to the south-east on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. The village is seated at the head of a low meadow, which extends about a mile and a half towards the sea, and the houses nearly surround an extensive triangular green interspersed with trees. On the south side of this space stand the ruins of Dirleton Castle, which belonged in the 9th century to a noble family, named De Vallebus or De Vaux, from whom it was taken, after a tedious siege, by Edward I. in 1298. In 1650 it was reduced and dismantled by the parliamentary general Lambert. About the middle of the 15th century this castle and the estate bestowed the title of the Earl of Dirleton on the Halyburton family. From ancient documents it would appear that a collegiate church was founded here in 1444, by Sir Walter Halyburton, but little is known of its character or site. On the east side of the links are the ruins of the ancient kirk, dedicated to St. Andrew, and well endowed. The present parish church, which stands a little below the green, bears a date (1661); it was considerably enlarged in 1825, and in 1854 a Gothic open roof was constructed. Archerfield is the residence of Henry Thos. Nisbet Hamilton-Ogilvy esq. D.L., J.P.

Gullane is a village, 2 miles south-west from Dirleton and near the western coast. At one time this was the capital of the parish to which it gave its name; but in 1612 the seat of worship was removed by Act of Parliament to Dirleton. The links in the vicinity are the resort of numbers of rabbits, and are farmed as a warren; the markets of Newcastle and Leeds being supplied with great quantities annually. The links have now become a favourite resort with golf players, and the village is attracting summer visitors. A supply of water from a bore and deep well producing 70,000 gallons per day was provided in 1896. On the small island of Fidra, lying off the northern coast, are the remains of a building, which served the purpose of a lazaretto in times of severe plague, and also acted as a beacon. A lighthouse has now been erected. Fenton and Kingston are also villages in the parish. Henry Thomas Nisbet Hamilton-Ogilvy esq. D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Henry Walter Hope esq. D.L., J.P., Lady Susan Ramsay and Sir Walter Hamilton-Dalrymple bart. D.L., J.P. The soil is fertile and produces excellent green crops; there are also some fine pastures. The area comprises 9,176 acres; rateable value, £16,501; the population in 1891 was 1,445, including 4 on Fidra island, and in 1881 the parish had a population of 1,506.

DUNBAR (which includes Belhaven) is a seaport town, royal and police burgh, on the coast of the North Sea, with a station on the North British railway, 11 miles north-east from Haddington and 29 east from Edinburgh; it is the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Lothian, and head of a small debt court district, and is also a civil and ecclesiastical parish in the East Lothian poor combination, and bounded south and east by Stenton and Spott, and west by Whitekirk. The town occupies a slightly elevated site, and the principal street is spacious. The Gas Works belong to the Corporation; and pure water supplied since 1896, from a burn 5 miles distant, at a cost of £3,000. Dunbar was elevated to the rank of a royal burgh by David II. and its burghal privileges were confirmed and extended by James IV. and James VI. It was governed by a provost and three bailies, a treasurer, town clerk and chamberlain, with fifteen members of council. A modern Act of Parliament has limited the number of corporate officers to a provost, three bailies, a treasurer and seven councillors. A small debt court is held in the Town Hall on the third Tuesday in February, March, May, October and December, and first Tuesday in July. The Castle covered a considerable extent of ground, but the date of its erection cannot be ascertained. It was considered a place of stategic importance as the key to Scotland on the east border; and it has often been besieged. It was taken by Edward I. in 1296, and being held for the English in 1314 by the Earl of Dunbar, Edward II. sought refuge in it after the battle of Bannockburn, quitting it by sea for Berwick. Its most memorable siege was in 1339, when the Countess of Dunbar, "Black Agnes," defended it for the Scottish Crown against an English army under the Earl of Salisbury. In Queen Mary's reign it was in possession of the Earl of Bothwell, and when the Queen became his prisoner, near Linlithgow, in 1567, he took her to this fortress, and the associated lords accepting the surrender of Mary at Carberry Hill, in June of the same year, it was on condition that Bothwell left her and retired to Dunbar. The castle was subsequently demolished by order of the Scottish Parliament, and nothing but fragments are now visible, some portion having been destroyed during the progress of the excavations for Victoria Harbour. On a columnar rocky projection, between these ruins and the harbour, was the battery, now abandoned by Government, and used as a hospital for fever patients. At Doonhill, near to the town, Cromwell, in 1650, fought the battle of Dunbar, defeating David Leslie, the old covenanting general, who had then espoused the King's side. At the southern end of the High street stands the parish church, erected on the site of the old kirk in 1819-21, at a cost of £8,000; its architectural style is the Perpendicular Gothic, and it affords 1,800 sittings; it has a square tower with pinnacles; the entire building is of a rather dark red stone: here is a beautiful marble monument to George Home, lord high treasurer of Scotland in the reign of James VI. The interior of the church is about to be renovated at a cost of £3,500. The United Presbyterians have a place of worship here, as have also the Free Church, the Episcopalians, the Roman Catholics, the Wesleyan Methodists and the Baptists.

The Harbour here was founded by Oliver Cromwell, and a portion of this now forms the east pier of the present harbour, which, in 1820, was improved by the addition of a dry and graving dock; this, however, was filled up and large stores erected upon the site. In 1842, a harbour, called the Victoria Harbour, was built at the joint expense of the town and Fishery Board; twenty years later it was greatly extended. It occupies a space of about five acres, and is frequented by vessels and boats for fishing purposes, as the herring fishery has long been a very considerable source of wealth to Dunbar. Frequently 300 boats are at this station, and large quantities of this fish are sent to the inland counties. A small number are also cured into white or red herrings. Cod fishing is likewise a profitable pursuit here, and the produce is mostly despatched to London. The Fishery Board for Scotland have a fish hatching station here; output in 1894, 26,060,000 plaice and 500,000 cod; in 1895, 38,615,000 plaice, 2,760,000 cod and 3,800,000 turbot. The chief exports are corn, fish and potatoes, and the imports coal and timber. The industries of Dunbar were at one period numerous and extensive; but the most important branch now in operation is fish curing, comprising several extensive concerns. In High street is a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and also one of the Bank of Scotland, and in Delisle street is one of the British Linen Company's Bank. Dunbar House, formerly the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale, stands at the northern end of the main street; its grand front facing the sea, and consists of a circular centre and two extensive wings. The house is now used as a barracks for the Second Brigade (Scottish Division) Royal Artillery. St. Catherine's Hall, at the south end, was opened on January 5th, 1872, and contains a spacious room, fitted for balls and concerts; also three large rooms held respectively by the Freemasons, Free Gardeners and Templars. The town has several Board schools. A building was erected in 1878 (on the beach, near the church), consisting of two wings with a house for the master in the centre; the eastern wing forms the burgh school, the western wing, called the Lamer Street school, being designed for primary education. The market is held on Tuesday. There are two annual fairs—one on the first Tuesday after the 26th of May, the other on the first Tuesday after the 22nd of November. The soil is rich and dry, and produces crops as early as any in Scotland. The Duke of Roxburghe and Sir George Warrender are the principal landowners. The parish of Dunbar extends about 8 miles along the coast, and the area comprises 7,497 acres; rateable value, £41,078; the population of the parish in 1891 was 5,210, which included 3,645 in the town, 350 being in the Belhaven portion, while the burgh population was returned as 3,554; the parish in 1881 had 5,396 inhabitants, and the town 3,661.

Belhaven is a village, included within the jurisdiction of the burgh of Dunbar, situated about a mile west from that town, at the head of a small bay of the sea, which in former times formed a good harbour. It gives the title of lord to a branch of the family of Hamilton. At a short distance are the remains of an ancient British cemetery. In the village, which is a quoad sacra parish erected from that of Dunbar, is a church in connection with the Church of Scotland. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,193.

East Barns is a village in Dunbar parish, about 3 miles south-east from the town, and a little to the right of the road leading thence to Berwick. In this village there is a school for the eastern district of the parish.

West Barns, another part of the royalty of Dunbar, is about half a mile from Belhaven. In this village there is a manufactory for agricultural implements. Here also is the landward Board school of Dunbar. Population in 1891, 471.

FALA and SOUTRA, anciently distinct parishes, partly in Haddingtonshire, form a united parish, and by Boundary Order 89,now wholly in Edinburghshire: the kirktown and the hamlet of Faladam being in the first named county and the united parish in the poor combination of Dalkeith and in the small debt court district of Haddington. The village of Fala lies on the road from Edinburgh to Lauder, 11 miles south-west from Haddington and 3½ miles north-east from Tynehead station on the North British main line from Carlisle to Edinburgh,and Soutra old church is 5 miles north-east from Heriot station on the same line. The western extremity of the Lammermuir Hills is in this part of the parish, terminating in Soutra Hill, 1,209 feet above sea level and the detached peak of Gilston, 1,362 feet. The area of the portion in this county comprises 2,940 acres; total for the united parish, 6,064; rateable value, £1,757; the population in this portion in 1891 was80.

Blackshiels, a small hamlet, originally a detached portion of the parish of Humbie, has been transferred by Boundary Order 89 to Fala, is about 3 miles north from Tynehead station.

GARVALD is a parish, in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded by the parishes of Morham and Whittinghame on the north and east, and by Yester on the west, and extends from near the centre of the county southward, among the Lammermoor hills, to the borders of Berwickshire. The village of Garvald, seated in a fertile valley on the banks of the small river Papana, which a little lower is called Biel water, is 22 miles east-south-east from Edinburgh, 8½ south-west from Dunbar, nearly 6 south-east from Haddington, and 5 south from East Linton station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. Within the parish are fine arable lands and also sheep walks; and the district contains a number of remains of antiquity. Among the latter are the ruins of Nunraw, a nunnery once of great importance, now the residence and property of Walter Wingate Gray esq. D.L., J.P. The Marquess of Tweeddale D.L. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,442 acres; rateable value, £7,301; the population in 1891 was 600, and in 1881, 758.

GLADSMUIR is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded on the north-west by the south shore of the Firth of Forth, on the west by the parish of Tranent, on the south by Pencaitland and Salton, on the east by Haddington and on the north by Aberlady; there are iron works in the parish, also some collieries. The parish church stands on the main road between Haddington and Tranent. George Heriot, the founder of the hospital at Edinburgh, is said to have been a native of this parish, and Dr. Robinson was its clergyman while engaged in writing the "History of Scotland." From the proximity of the hamlet of Gladsmuir to the scene of the battle of Prestonpans, that conflict was called by the Jacobite party "the battle of Gladsmuir." The village of Gladsmuir is 4 miles west from Haddington, 3½ east from Tranent and 2 north-east from Macmerry terminal station on the North British railway.

Longniddry is a village near the shore of the Firth of Forth, and has a junction station on the Dunbar and Berwick line. Macmerry, also a village, is on the western border of the parish; here is the terminus of the Ormiston branch line.

Penston, a colliery village, is 1 mile south-west of Gladsmuir and 1 east from Macmerry railway station. Here are several coal pits.

Samuelston, on the left bank of the river Tyne, is also a village in the parish, 3½ miles south-west from Haddington.

The Earl of Wemyss and March is the principal landowner. The area comprises 7,044 acres; rateable value, £15,091; the population in 1891 was 1,604, and in 1881, 1,747.

HADDINGTON,

WITH NUNGATE.

HADDINGTON, the county town of East Lothian, is a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and a parish in Inveresk poor combination, 17 miles east from Edinburgh, 38 north-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 11 west-by-south from Dunbar and 10 south from North Berwick, and has a terminal station of a branch line from Longniddry on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway; it is on the west bank of the river Tyne, which is here crossed by two bridges, giving access to the suburb of Nungate. The streets are spacious and are lighted by gas by a company formed in 1835. In 1893 the Long Yester Water supply to the burgh of Haddington was introduced. The supply, which is used in conjunction with the Chesters water, amounts to 90 gallons a minute, and provision is made for increasing this to 120 gallons per minute. The total cost of the new supply is over £6,000. The corporation of the burgh consists of a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twelve councillors; they hold a court every Monday. A sheriff and commissary court sits every Thursday; one for small debts every alternate Thursday, a justice of peace court the second Tuesday of each month; a court of quarter sessions is held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and on the last Tuesday of October; and an adjourned quarter sessions on the second Thursday in January.

The Town's Buildings, to which was added in 1831 a fine spire, 170 feet in height, at a cost of about £1,500, comprise the burgh council room, and assembly and public reading room. This pile, which has evidently been erected at different periods, forms the extreme western end of a long range of buildings separating the spacious High street from the equally wide Market street. The County buildings are at the west end of the town; they contain sheriff and justice of the peace court rooms, with appropriate offices and jury and witness rooms. The building is in the Early English style and was erected at a cost of £5,470.

Haddington is unquestionably of very ancient origin; for in a charter granted by Ada, the widow of Prince Henry (and mother of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion), dated 1178, she styled it "Meum Burgum de Haddington." The King's army rested here the night before the battle of Prestonpans; and some years since, in excavating a site for a tank, human bones, with those of horses, leather belting and pieces of decayed iron, were found in considerable quantities. The suburb called Nungate, which is approached across the Tyne by the Waterloo bridge, of one arch, built in 1817; as also by another bridge, ancient and narrow, of three small arches, derives its name from a nunnery founded by Ada, which stood about a quarter of a mile from the town. It was in this abbey or nunnery that a parliament was convened on the 7th of July, 1548, during the siege of Haddington, when consent was given to the marriage of the unfortunate Mary to the Dauphin of France, and to her being educated at that court. The street from the West Port to the Town House, now called Court street, was of old named "King street," no doubt from the King's palace being situated therein. It was here that Alexander II. first saw the light, having been born in the palace on the 24th of August, 1198. At the east end of Nungate street is seen the roofless ruin of St. Martin's church, which has been but little used since the Reformation. The town has suffered severely at different periods by conflagrations and inundations. In 1216 it was burnt by King John, and in 1244 it shared the same fate by accident. In 1358 whole villages were swept away by the overflow of the Tyne, the waters of which approached the monastery, but did no damage. The 4th October, 1775, is memorable for the rising of the Tyne, eight feet nine inches, at which it continued for several hours. A plate recording this occurrence is placed at the east corner of High street. The house in which John Knox was said to have been born was shown in Gifford gate, but the village of Gifford is considered his birth-place: he, however, was educated in part in this town. The trade of Haddington consists principally in corn; and it is considered one of the leading grain marts of Scotland. There are also agricultural implement and coach building works, one for the manufacture of sacking, two breweries, two iron-foundries, tanneries, two cloth mills and two corn mills. There are four banking establishments, viz.: a branch of the British Linen Company, the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland.

The parish church, at one time the church of a Franciscan abbey, is supposed to have been erected about the 12th or 13th century. The west end is the only portion now used, in the repairing of which nearly £6,000 was expended in 1811; the east end of the church and the old square tower are now a ruin. A memorial stained window, the gift of Miss Aitchison, of Alderston, was erected in 1893; the subject is St. John at Patmos. In a corner of the edifice is the burial place of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, who for many generations possessed Lethington, or "Lennox Love."

In the centre of the town is a monument to George, eighth Marquess of Tweeddale K.T., G.C.B. Field Marshal, d. 1876, and to the west, along the Edinburgh road, still partially stands the village of St. Lawrence House, at which place King James V. built and endowed a leper hospital, and a chapel dedicated to St. Lawrence once existed, but the exact spot has not been identified; a dilapidated building on the north side of the road is supposed to have been the "Leprous House." The county Lunatic Asylum (opened in 1866) stands a short distance from the town. There is a free library, also a law and an excellent subscription library. The charities are numerous, and several societies and clubs have been established for various objects. The Knox Institute, erected in 1878 in memory of John Knox, takes the place of the Burgh School. It is scheduled as one of the secondary or higher class schools of Scotland, and provides a first-class classical, mathematical and English education for children of the district. It will hold 400 pupils, and was erected at a cost of £7,000. The Haddington and Salton Agricultural Societies were united in 1819, and now form one of the most flourishing local associations in the kingdom, annually distributing in premiums about £300; the Marquess of Tweeddale is patron. The bowling green is between Elm House and the Nungate bridge, and is interesting from the fact of its being the oldest in Scotland, having been used successfully for over 200 years. The Corn Exchange, in Court street, was opened 29th Sept. 1854. The weekly market is held on Friday; the sale of oats commences at twelve, barley at twenty minutes past twelve, beans and peas at a quarter to one, and wheat at one. A weekly auction for the sale of live stock is also held every alternate Monday. A cattle fair is held in October, and the United East Lothian Agricultural Society hold their meetings here for the show of stock, implements, seed &c.; for the show of seed corn in February and October, of stock in March and July, and roots and poultry in December. Three papers are published here weekly, the "Haddingtonshire Advertiser" (Friday), "Haddingtonshire Courier" (Friday) and "North Berwick Advertiser" (Wednesday). Lennox Love is the seat of Lord Blantyre; Alderston House, Lady Denman; Stevenson, of Sir Robert C. Sinclair bart. and Clerkington, the residence of Major James F. Houston. The area of the parish comprises 12,113 acres; rateable value, £38,411; the population in 1891 was 5,216 and in 1881, 5,660; in 1891 the town had a population including 712 in the Nungate portion, of 3,771.

INNERWICK is a parish and village, in East Lothian poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Dunbar; the parish is bounded by Oldhamstocks on the east, Spott and Dunbar on the west, the sea on the north, and Cranshaws and Longformacus (in Berwickshire) on the south; it measures 10 miles in length, by a breadth varying from 2 to 3. The village has a station, about a mile west, on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway, and is 30 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 east from Haddington, and 4 south from Dunbar, lying rather more than a mile to the west of the road leading from the latter town to Berwick. The Established church was built in 1784. In 1870 the interior of the church was thoroughly renovated. There is also a Free church in the village. About a mile west of the village is the handsome mansion of Richard Hunter esq. J.P., D.L. of Thurston, and about three-quarters of a mile to the south-east of Innerwick are the remains of a castle of that name standing on the summit of a rocky eminence, overhanging a woody glen, which divides the castle from the fortlet of Thornton. The castle, which originally belonged to the Hamiltons of Innerwick, was besieged, taken and destroyed, after an obstinate resistance by the troops under the Duke of Somerset. The remains of several military encampments can be traced in the neighbourhood. The Marquess of Tweeddale, Richard Hunter esq. and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 13,157 acres; rateable value, £11,145; the population in 1891 was 761, and in 1881, 777.

Post & Telegraph Office (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O. East Lothian added); John Ford, postmaster. Deliveries, 9.15 a.m. & 7.10 p.m.; dispatches, 7.55 a.m. & 1 & 5.30 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid MORHAM is a small parish in the centre of the county, about 3 miles south-east from Haddington station on the North British line, and in the Haddington small debt court district; it figured largely in the time of Queen Mary, whose third husband, James, Earl of Bothwell, was proprietor of Mainshill. At that time there was a comparatively large village, which has, however, long ago disappeared, and the parish is now wholly agricultural. The parish church is a plain stone building, and there is also a board school and school house, erected in 1875, at a cost of about £1,300. The area comprises 2,087 acres; rateable value, £2,522; the population in 1891 was 199, and in 1881, 209.

OLDHAMSTOCKS is a village, at the extreme east of the county, and the parish extends into the county of Berwick, to the shore of the North Sea, and is between 7 and 8 miles in length, by a breadth of about 2; it is bounded on the north-west, west, and part of the south by Innerwick, and by Cockburnspath on the east, and is in East Lothian poor combination, and small debt court district of Dunbar; the village stands in a valley on the road from Dunbar to Duns, 3 miles south-east from Innerwick and about 3 south-west from Cockburnspath station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. Dunglass, a modern mansion near the coast, the seat of Sir Basil Francis Hall bart. D.L. is built on the site of Dunglass Castle, a fortress noticed in Scottish history; originally one of the many strongholds of the Earls of Home, and still gives its title to Lord Dunglass. In 1640 the Earl of Haddington, and several others who had joined the Covenanters, took possession of the castle, for the purpose of watching the garrison of Berwick. While here the earl received a letter from General Leslie, and was standing in the court yard reading it to the company there assembled, when the powder magazine blew up, which, throwing down one of the side walls, overwhelmed his lordship, together with his auditors, who all perished in the ruins. The deed is said to have been perpetrated by one of the earl's faithless attendants, who ignited a barrel of gunpowder. The land is fertile on the sea coast, and rises gradually towards the Lammermoor Hills, which are chiefly pastoral. The area comprises 8,837 acres, of which 2,345 acres are in Berwickshire; rateable value, £4,377; the population in 1891 was 529, 95 in Berwickshire, and in 1881, 568, of whom 119 were in Berwickshire.

ORMISTON is a parish and village, on the western border of the county; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Tranent, on the east by Pencaitland, on the south-east by Humbie and on the west by Edinburghshire, and is in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; the village is in the northern part of the parish, 2½ miles south of Tranent, and consists of one spacious street, with a cross in the centre, and has a station on the Macmerry section of the North British railway. The parish church stands 1½ miles to the south-west of the village; there is also a Free church and two public schools. The Rev. Robert Moffat D.D. the South African missionary, was born here 1796; he died in 1873, and a monument has been erected to his memory. The parish abounds in coal of excellent quality. Ormiston Hall, a seat of the Earl of Hopetoun, is 1 mile south of the village. There are traces of a Danish camp on the summit of Dodridge Law, an eminence near the southern extremity of the parish. The Earl of Hopetoun is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,444 acres; rateable value, £6,984; the population in 1891 was 1,178, and in 1881, 1,026.

PENCAITLAND is a parish and village near the western border of the county and is in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington. The village is 2 miles east from Ormiston, 2½ north-west from East Salton and about 1 south-east from Winton station on the Macsherry section of the North British railway, and is placed on the banks of the Tyne water, which is here crossed by an old stone bridge and runs in an easterly direction through the centre of the parish. The district forms the east-most limit of the great coal range of the Lothians, and limestone and freestone also abound. The parish church is on the eastern side of the river. There is also a Free church and a school, which was enlarged in 1887, at the cost of about £1,300. About half a mile north-west of the village is Winton Castle, an extensive pile, partly ancient, formerly the residence of the Earls of Winton, previous to the attainder of the Seaton family in 1715. It is now the property of Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy, of Archerfield and Biel. Fountain Hall, the seat of Sir Thos. North Dick Lauder bart. and Tyneholm House, are handsome mansions in this parish. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy is the principal landowner. The area comprises 5,075 acres; rateable value, £8,444; the population in 1891 was 1,125 and in 1881, 1,107.

PRESTONPANS is a market town, burgh of barony, and police burgh and parish in Inveresk poor combination and the small debt court district of Tranent, 9 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 south-west from North Berwick, 9½ west-north-west from Haddington and 3 east from Musselburgh; situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, having a station on the Edinburgh and Dunbar section of the North British railway. The town consists principally of one long street running parallel with the Forth, and is much frequented during the bathing season by visitors from Edinburgh and different parts of the country. The harbour, situated a little to the westward of the town, and called Morison Haven, has a quay for shipping coal and the manufactures of the place, which comprise earthenware, fire-bricks and other articles, made from fire-clay, common bricks, tiles and salt; the latter originated here at an early date, having been made by the monks in 1189. There is also an extensive brewery and the large soap works of Messrs. James Mellis & Co. Oysters are taken in the Forth, near the town, and considerable quantities are sent to the markets of Edinburgh, Newcastle, and even to London. The mines of coal in the neighbourhood are very rich; a seam is now being worked by the Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Company, within 200 yards of the quay, and there is a stratum of fire-clay underlaid by ironstone. Prestonpans received its charter as a burgh of barony in 1617, in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, which ancient village (Preston) is included with the eastern part of the town in the charter; a suburb called "Kuittle," or more properly "Cuthill," the western portion, also enjoys a charter, which was granted originally by the abbey of Newbattle; this division is possessed by Sir G. Grant-Suttie bart. who is also patron of the parish. In the main street is a monument to Thomas Alexander C.B. late director general of the medical department of the British army. Schaw's Hospital, at Preston village, is an extensive building, erected in 1831 in the Old English style, at an expense of nearly £3,000, out of funds bequeathed by Dr. Schaw, in 1781. The institution was first opened in 1784, in Preston House, which stood behind the present erection; it was founded for the education and maintenance of 21 boys, children of indigent parents, those of the name of Schaw, M'Neil, Cunningham and Stewart having a preference of entry. This trust has been modified at the instance of the Endowed Schools Commissioners, part of the fund being now devoted to giving free education to a large number of children in the public school, and another part is spent in bursaries open to the public school children, in Haddingtonshire. The house is now occupied by Miss Mary Murray's Hospital—an establishment for the training of domestic servants. About 1½ miles to the eastward lies a hamlet called Meadow Mill, the site of the battle commonly known as Prestonpans, fought in 1745, between Prince Charles Edward and General John Cope, who commanded the English troops, which had been collected to oppose the Pretender's advance south; these having failed to meet him in the Highlands had returned by sea to Dunbar, and advancing from that town by the coast road were encamped between the village of Cockenzie and the high ground about Tranent, their left flank covered by a morass below that village; the Highland army, marching from Duddingston, bivouacked at Tranent on the night of the 20th September, 1745, and in the early morning of the 21st were conducted in a mist by a path from Tranent to Cockenzie, which avoided the morass and enabled them to surprise the English, whose cavalry fled from either flank, leaving their infantry to be cut up by the Highlanders, who drove the survivors in a confused rout to the gates of Berwick, capturing guns, military chest, baggage &c. Col. James Gardiner, whose house (Bunkton House) stands close to the battlefield, was killed on the field and a monument has been erected to his memory. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Preston Grange, the residence of Sir George Grant-Suttie bart.; Drummore, the residence of Col. William Aitchison, and Northfield, the residence of Miss Sprott. Preston Tower, in this vicinity, formerly the seat of the Hamiltons of Preston, is now a ruin. Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. Col. William Aitchison and James M. S. Neil are the principal landowners. The area comprises 1,294 acres; rateable value, £12,518; rateable value of the burgh, £4,185; the population in 1891 was 2,659, including 2,224 in the burgh and in 1881 was 2,573, with 2,265 in the burgh; the police burgh in 1891 contained 1,606 persons.

SALTON is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination, and small debt court district of Haddington; it lies chiefly in a fertile valley on the north side of the Lammermoor Hills, bounded on the north, west and south by the Tyne and Salton rivers, and on the east by the parishes of Bolton and Haddington, and contains the villages of East and West Salton. The village of East Salton is 15 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 5 south-west from Haddington and about 4 south-east from Winton (the nearest) station on the Macmerry section of the North British railway. The parish church, a cruciform building with a tower and spire 90 feet high, stands in the village; the church was almost rebuilt in 1805. Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury in 1689, had Salton for his first benefice (1665), and for four years performed the duties of parish minister; and it was here that he used the only book of common prayer known to have existed in the Episcopal Church of Scotland during the reign of Charles II. This eminent churchman and historian bequeathed a valuable library to the parish, besides a considerable sum for educating, clothing and apprenticing 30 poor children; the proceeds of the bequests amount now to about £96 per annum. Andrew Fletcher, a political writer, and pupil of Bishop Burnet, was born in this parish in 1655, was some time a member of the Scottish Parliament; afterwards took part in the rebellion under the Duke of Monmouth (1685), for which he suffered exile, returning in the year 1688 with William III. and was subsequently a bitter opponent of the union of the two kingdoms, and died in 1716. Salton Hall, a mansion standing in a fine park on the western border of the parish, is the seat of John Fletcher esq. J.P. who is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,812 acres; rateable value, £4,559; the population in 1891 was 495, and in 1881, 575.

SPOTT is a parish and village, in the eastern side of the county; the parish, irregular in form, measures about 9 miles in length by 1 to 3 in breadth; it is in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Dunbar. The low country is well inclosed and cultivated, and the higher grounds afford good pasture. The village is 2 miles south from Dunbar station on the Edinburgh to Berwick section of the North British railway. Here is the parish church; also a public school. Spott House, the seat of Miss Adelaide Watt, stands upon a rock, rising from a low glen, and surrounded with fine policies. The area comprises 7,583 acres; rateable value, £6,009; the population in 1891 was 475, and in 1881, 579.

STENTON is a parish and small village, in East Lothian poor combination and Haddington small debt court district; the village is about 7 miles east from Haddington and 4½ miles south-east from East Linton station on the Edinburgh to Berwick section of the North British railway. This place gives a second title to Baron Bellhaven. About a mile south of the village is an artificial piece of water, serpentine in form, and nearly two miles in length, and averages about 400 yards in breadth, though in some places it is double the latter proportion, and in others much narrower; the banks are high, steep, and well wooded. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy, of Archerfield, Winton and Biel, the owner, permits parties to ramble through the grounds and plantations, or make excursions upon the lake, boats for the purpose being provided. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy and T. B. Sydserff are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,676 acres; rateable value, £5,094; the population in 1891 was 556, and in 1881, 594.

TRANENT is a town and police burgh, the head of a small debt court district and a parish in Inveresk poor combination, 10 miles east from Edinburgh, 18 west-by-south from Dunbar, 7 west from Haddington, about 1 south-east from Prestonpans (the nearest) station on the Berwick and Dunbar section of the North British railway, and 2 west from Macmerry terminal station, near the eastern border of the parish. The town occupies elevated ground on the main road from Edinburgh to Dunbar. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the adjacent collieries, which have been wrought in this quarter from the first discovery of coal in Scotland. The parish church, which stands at the foot of the town, is a plain edifice with a square tower; Colonel Gardiner, who fell in the battle of Prestonpans, 1745, was interred in it. There are also a Free church erected in 1814, a United Presbyterian church, built in 1826, a Roman Catholic church, opened July 28th, 1892, and public schools. The Town Hall was built in 1888 and used for public entertainments, cost £1,000. The Royal Bank of Scotland has a branch here. Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphinstone Tower, once a baronial residence; and in other parts of the parish are the ruins of Waterfallside Castle, Seton Castle, and the remains of a once collegiate church. Tranent is the seat of John Polson esq. Elphinstone, a small village in the parish, is 2 miles south from Tranent. The principal landowners are John Polson esq. The Earl of Wemyss and March and Henry Callander esq. D.L., J.P. WHITTINGHAME is an extensive parish, reaching from the borders of Berwickshire, a length of 11 miles northward, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Stenton, on the west by Garvald and Morham,and on the north-west by Prestonkirk; it is in the East Lothian poor combination, and Haddington small debt court district. The village is very small, and is near the northern extremity of the parish, 6 miles east from Haddington and about 3 south from East Linton station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. There is a church of the Establishment and two public schools. Whittinghame, a fine mansion on Whittinghame water, surrounded by pleasure grounds and plantations, is the seat of the Right Hon. Arthur James Balfour P.C., M.P. The grounds are open to the public under certain restrictions. Little Says Law, 1,569 feet, and Priestlaw, 1,349 feet above sea level, are peaks in the Lammermoor Hills, which cover a considerable part of the parish. The area comprises 15,595 acres; rateable value, £6,545; the population in 1891 was 586, and in 1881, 639.

YESTER is a parish in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded on the east by the parish of Garvald, on the west by Bolton and Humbie, on the north by Haddington, and extends southward to Berwickshire; near the southern extremity is Lammer Law, a peak of the Lammermoor Hills, 1,733 feet above sea-level.

Gifford is a village on Gifford water, 20 miles east-south-east from Edinburgh, 9 south-east from Tranent, and 4 south from Haddington station on the Longniddry to Haddington branch of the North British railway. The village is well built, and consists of two spacious streets of unequal length, one end of the longest ornamented with a fine avenue of lofty trees, which extends for a mile in a southerly direction, and terminates at Yester House, the noble mansion of the Marquess of Tweeddale D.L. This village was the birthplace of Jn. Knox, the Reformer, in 1505, who instituted the Protestant worship in Scotland, and preached against existing bishops and clergy in 1556, was tried and acquitted of high treason in 1563, and died in 1572, and buried in St. Giles', Edinburgh. There is a Free church in the village. The parish church, erected in 1708,stands at the eastern end of the shorter street; it contains a pulpit of oak of much greater antiquity than the building itself, called Knox's pulpit. What was formerly the parochial school is now used for lectures &c.; another schoolroom having been built at the east end of the village. There is another Board school in the parish, situated at Longyester.

Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in March, the third Tuesday in June and the first Tuesday in October. The Marquess of Tweeddale is the principal landowner. The area comprises 8,848 acres; rateable value, £7,233; the population in 1891 was 716, 305 being in the village of Gifford, and in 1881, 924, of which 382 were in the village.

THE INNER HEBRIDES.

See ARGYLLSHIRE for MULL, JURA, ISLAY & Smaller Islands; AND INVERNESS-SHIRE for SKYE, Small Isles, &c.

THE OUTER HEBRIDES.

THE Outer or Western Hebrides, so called to distinguish them from the inner range of islands, Islay &c., which lie closer in to the mainland, consist of those islands exposed to the Atlantic, and are outside the Little Minch, extending from north-east, at Butt of Lewis, to the south-western point of Barra Head, and include the large islands of Lewis (with its southern adjunct of Harris), North and South Uist, Benbecula and Barra, and the smaller ones of Scarpa, Taransay, Scalpa, the four Pabbays, Berneray, Balshane, Rona, Gremsay, Eriskay, Vatersay, Hecla, and Saundry, besides many still smaller islets. The four northern parishes (or Lewis proper) form part of the county of Ross, the remainder being in Inverness-shire. The entire length of this string of islands, which is sometimes known as Long Island, is about 130 miles, with a breadth varying from 1 mile to 30. The area is 1,060 square miles, or 715,665 acres; in 1891 the population was 44,987, and in 1881 42,804. The St. Kilda group is also included in the Outer Hebrides; they lie 60 miles west from Harris. The Hebrides do not appear to have fallen under the Roman yoke, though known to Pliny as the Hebrides, but formed part of the Dalryadan kingdom, and in the latter years of the 9th century, the Scoto Picts who occupied them were overrun by the Northmen, who established a viceroy on the Isle of Man, who had jurisdiction over Dublin, Man and the Western Isles, or Sudreys. The defeat of Haco, at Largs, in 1263, ended the dominion of the Northmen, though the descendants of Somerled, a chief of Cantyre, who had since 1164 held the lordship of the Isles, continued to rule them as feudal chiefs, and appear to have acted as independent sovereigns in forming treaties &c. though nominally subject to the Scottish kings, but James V. suppressed the title, and subsequently the property passed to the Campbells; the chieftainship, however, continued to be a subject of dispute, and the Islands were in a very unsettled condition until, in 1748, regular sheriffs were appointed, and all heritable jurisdictions abolished. After the battle of Culloden, Prince Charles Edward fled to Moidart and sailed from Arisaig, landing on the 24th April, 1746, at Rossinish, Isle of Benbecula, and staying on these islands until 28 June, when he left for Isle of Skye. There are many tumuli and remains of round forts, also a fine Druidical circle at Callanish.

Soil, Minerals &c.—The climate is mild, being surrounded by sea water, and the salt particles are inimical to the growth of trees; therefore the islands are destitute of wood, but there is a considerable extent of heath and peat lands and some large tracts of sand. In Harris the hills rise to between 2,000 and 3,000 feet above the sea level, but in other parts of the islands are dwarfed. Large quantities of kelp are collected along the coasts, and fishery is the staple industry. There are a good many sheep and a fine breed of black cattle.

The coasts are much indented by sea lochs, and Stornoway furnishes an excellent harbour. The communication is by steamer from Glasgow.

These islands contain four parishes—Barra, Harris, North Uist and South Uist—in Inverness-shire, and four parishes—Barvas, Lochs, Stornoway and Uig—in Ross-shire, these latter forming the Island of Lewis. There are 12 ecclesiastical parishes, forming the presbyteries of Uist and Lewis, in the Synod of Glenelg. The parliamentary representation is included within those of Ross-shire and Inverness-shire. There are no royal burghs, and only one large town, Stornoway, which is a police burgh and the seat of a sheriff court.

BARRA is a parish in the south of the Long island, and in Long Island poor combination; it contains the village of Castlebay and the kirktown, known as Craigston, both on the island of Barra, and includes the isle of Barra, Bernera, Fuday, Hecla, Hellisay, Mingalay, Pabbay, Sanderay and Vatersay. At Castlebay there are the ruins of the old stronghold of the MacNeils; there are several small lochs with good trout fishing, and the shores are rocky with fine cliff scenery. The island of Barra is about 7 miles long by a width of 3. The area of the entire parish comprises 22,212 acres; rateable value, £2,446; the population in 1891 was 2,365, of whom 2,125 were on the island of Barra, and in 1881 was 2,161.

On Bernera island is Barra Head lighthouse, 580 feet above the sea.

BENBECULA, see SOUTH UIST.

BERNERA ISLAND, see UIG, p. 750

BERNERAY, see HARRIS.

CASTLEBAY, see BARRA.

HARRIS is a parish, forming the south end of Lewis Island, but treated as a separate island, and is in the county of Inverness, whereas the rest of Lewis is in Ross-shire; it extends from north to south for about 20 miles, by a width of about 8 to 15; it is in the Long Island poor combination, and small debt court district of Stornoway, and includes the isles of Berneray, Ensay, Killigray, Pabbay, Scalpa, Scarp, Scotsway, Soay, St. Kilda and Tarrensay, and other small isles. The Kirktown, generally known as Tarbert-Harris, to distinguish it from the other Tarberts, stands on an isthmus between East Loch Tarbert and West Loch Tarbert, which nearly divide the parish in half. Near the southern point of Harris stand the ruins of the Augustine Priory church of Rodel (or Rowdill); it is a cruciform structure with an eastern tower, and has in the north wall a remarkable sculptured tomb (1428) with effigy of a warrior in plate armour. There are several large hills; Chesabhal rising to about 2,600 feet above sea level. Five-eighths of the inhabitants of Harris are landless cottars who pay neither rent nor taxes; these reside in what are known as "black huts," and are most industrious in the manufacture of Harris tweeds.

Berneray is a quoad sacra parish formed out of that of Harris, and including its churches. There are two Established and four Free churches, and also twelve public schools in the parish. The Earl of Dunmore is the principal landowner.

The area comprises 123,757 acres; rateable value, £5,738; population in 1891 was 5,024, and in 1881, 4,814

St. Kilda is a group of small islands in this parish, lying out in the Atlantic, 60 miles west of Harris; the northern point being a hill called Connacher, rising 1,400 feet from sea level. Population in 1891, 71.

THE ISLAND OF LEWIS

CONSISTS of the parishes of Stornoway, Barvas, Uig and Lochs in the county of Ross, while the fifth parish, Harris (which, though geographically part of Lewis, is considered almost a distinct island), is in the county of Inverness; the portion of the island known as "Lewis" is 40 miles from north to south, by 30 in breadth, and is bounded on the east by the Minch, south by Harris and west and north by the Atlantic Ocean. It was acquired by the late Sir James Matheson bart. of Achany, in 1844, from the representatives of the late Earl of Seaforth, for the sum of £190,000. Among the improvements accomplished may be mentioned the draining of a large surface of moor or waste land, planting several hundred acres with timber trees, whilst immediately surrounding the castle, pleasure grounds and walks have been laid out, and drives formed. In Stornoway a patent slip was constructed at a cost of £7,000, for vessels of 800 tons. The white fishery, consisting of cod and ling, has been long and successfully prosecuted in these waters, besides which the salmon fishery is very productive. The ling and cod are caught during the winter and spring months, and are dried and sent to the Glasgow and Liverpool markets. The months of May, June and July are the season for herring fishing, when it is estimated that close upon 1,000 boats, with a complement of five hands to each boat, are employed, and as many as 60,000 and 70,000 barrels have been forwarded in one year, chiefly to the Hamburg, Stettin and St. Petersburgh markets. Many steamers are employed in carrying the fish to the nearest railway stations at Strome Ferry and Oban, and to Fleetwood and other ports. At Stornoway a large quantity is prepared in a kippered state, and exported principally to the English markets, there being several establishments in full operation. In 1894, 775 boats, of an aggregate tonnage of 5,978, employing 4,166 hands (besides 518 extra hands), were registered at the port of Stornoway, and 13 other vessels aggregating 897 tons were also registered there. The total area is 404,166 acres; rateable value, £31,471 19s. 2d.; the population of the four parishes in 1891 being 27,590. The trustees of the late Lady Matheson (died March, 1896), own the island.

Barvas is a parish in the extreme northern end of Lewis, with a kirktown, 12 miles north-west from Stornoway; it is 20 miles in length, with a breadth of about 8, and is bounded on the north and north-west and north-east by the Atlantic, the south and south-east by the parish of Stornoway and on the south-west by Uig, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lews poor combination.

Cross is a quoad sacra parish, erected from this parish and forms the northern portion and in it is the group of villages known as Swainbost, extending along the road from Cross village to Port of Ness, and having a population in 1891 of 1,589. The Butt of Lewis is a singular detached rock off the northern point of the parish. The area comprises 85,043 acres; rateable value, £82,610; population in 1891, 5,699, and in 1881, 5,325.

STORNOWAY is a seaport and police burgh and parish in the island of Lewis, county of Ross. The town, which has greatly increased in importance of late years, is 60 miles north from Portree (in Skye), and 45 from Poolewe, in Loch Ewe. It is situated in north latitude 58 deg. 12 min. and in west longitude 6 deg. 18 min. 10 sec. at the head of a fine bay, called Loch Stornoway, one of the safest and most commodious harbours in the north, and easy of access to vessels of any burthen at any time of the tide. The north side of the bay and harbour is formed by the peninsular of Eye, which projects into the Minch for about 6 miles, then turns to the north for another 6 and forms a large bay 7 by 5 miles, opening to the north-east. A lighthouse stands on Arinish point, on the south side of the harbour, erected by the Commissioners of Northern Lights. The parish, which is bounded east by the Minch, south by Lochs and west by Barvas, extends 17 miles by 8 from north-east to south-west. The town, which is the head of a sheriff court district and of a poor combination, is built round the bay, in form of an amphitheatre. A quay, with slips and landing places, has been constructed. A sea wall has since been erected round the basin of the harbour. Situated on the quay is the fish mart, built in 1894 by the Pier and Harbour Commission, at a cost of about £1,500. Lews Castle, a fine mansion in the Tudor castellated style, occupies a commanding position west of the town, and was erected by the late Sir James Matheson, at an outlay of £60,000, surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds. From small origin, Stornoway has gradually risen to considerable importance. The streets of the burgh are well lighted with gas, the works having been erected in 1848. Stornoway was erected into a burgh of barony by James VI. with the design of promoting the civilization of the Western Isles; it has adopted the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. A sheriff court sits every Wednesday during the session for ordinary and small debt business, and justice of peace, commissary and criminal courts are held as occasion may require. There are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, British Linen Co. Bank and Caledonian Banking Co. Limited. The Free Church school is conducted upon the plan of the Normal Seminary; there is also a school for females, instituted and endowed by the late proprietor and his lady, affording a thorough English education to the numerous pupils. There are in all 10 public schools. The Nicholson Institution, James street, now under the management of the School Board, was endowed by the late Sir James Matheson with £35 yearly for the teacher. The same gentleman also contributed the site for the building and playgrounds. The Lewis Hospital has been erected a short distance from the town, by public subscription, at a cost of about £2,200 and is a substantial stone building, the architect being John Heaton Gall, of Inverness, and the contractors Bain and Macleod, Stornoway. Plans have been passed and building operations commenced for the erection of a combination poor house for Lewis. There are three hotels, the Lewis, the Royal and the Imperial. The Masonic Hall is a handsome structure; in it are held assemblies, concerts and public meetings; in the same building is a public library. There are several societies for mutual improvement, including the Young Men's and the Free Church Young Men's Christian Associations. There is also a public library and reading room; to the latter strangers are admitted free upon the recommendation of a member. In this parish the surface generally is flat and moorland, the shores partly sand and partly rock, and indented by a number of bays. Steamers ply frequently between Glasgow and Stornoway, besides those which call at Stornoway weekly. The most remarkable ancient remains in the island of Lewis are the Druidical standing stones or Temple of Callanish, for which see Uig. There is a cave at Gress, 200 feet in length, frequented by seals. The trustees of the late Lady Matheson are proprietors of the island of Lewis. The area comprises 63,224 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £4,777 7s. 7d. and of the parish £14,466 15s. 9d. The population of the parish in 1891 was 11,799, of whom 3,287 were in the burgh, and in 1881 10,389, with 2,627 in the burgh. The total population of the town was 3,386 in 1891, and 2,693 in 1881.

UIG is a parish in the western part of Lewis Island, with a kirktown near the coast, 34 miles west from Stornoway; it is about 24 miles in length with a breadth of about 18, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Barvas, on the east by Stornoway, south-east by Lochs, south by Loch Resort, and on the west and north-west by the Atlantic, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lews poor combination; the parish includes the isles of Bernera, Crensay and Pabay. The ancient Temple of Callernish, or "The Bleak Hill," stands on the northern shore of Loch Roag, in the parish of Uig, and consists of a circle of 13 monoliths, 43 feet in diameter, approached from the four points of the compass by avenues of monoliths, and containing within the centre enclosure a square stone-lined excavation, which may have been a grave, though tradition assigns the remains as part of a Druidical grove; the longest existing avenue is 173 feet in length, and the upright stones measure 4½ to 12 feet in height; the late Sir James Matheson had the ground cleared and the accumulations of soil removed, thus opening up the monoliths, and surrounded the whole with a wire fence. Half a mile to the east is another smaller circle, and other detached specimens of these stones exist in various parts of the island. The parish contains 2 Established and one Free church and 8 public schools. At Mealista Uig are some remains of the shrine of St. Catan, and near by those of a nunnery of the Black Sisters. At a little distance from this locality there were discovered, some years ago, upwards of 60 ebony figures, beautifully executed, and from their costume evidently very ancient. The area comprises 122,795 acres; rateable value, £5,740 6s. 10d.; the population in 1891 was 3,660, and in 1881, 3,498.

NORTH UIST is an island and parish, about 17 miles long by a width of from 3 to 13 miles, bounded on the east by the Little Minch, on the west by the Atlantic, north by the Sound of Harris, and south by Loch Rueval; the parish is in Long Island poor combination, and includes the smaller isles of Baleshare and Illeray, Boveray, Grimisay, Heisker, Hut, Kirkibost, Levera, Mhorgay, Monach, Ronay and Vallay.

Lochmaddy is the chief village in the parish; it is the head of the Long Island poor combination, and has daily communication by steamer with Dunvegan, in Skye. The village is on the eastern side of the island, at the head of Loch Maddy, which forms a natural harbour, the entrance being protected by two rocky promontories known as Maddy Mohr and MaddyBeg. The Shillay lighthouse is on a rock west of the Monach Islands. There are two Established and one Free church, and twelve public schools in the parish.

Trumisgarry, a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parish of North Uist, is in the northern part of the island.

Fairs are held in May, on the Friday before Portree; July, Friday after South Uist, and in September on the Friday week before Sligachan. The area of the entire parish comprises 75,431 acres; the population in 1891 was 4,187, and in 1881, 4,134; in 1891 the ecclesiastical parish of Trumisgarry had a population of 846.

SOUTH UIST is an island and parish, 7 miles south of North Uist, about 21 miles long by a width of 7 at its widest part, bounded on the west by the Atlantic, on the east by the Little Minch, on the north by Benbecula Sound, and on the south by the Sound of Barra; the surface in the northern part is flat, but the remainder is hilly and mountainous, Hekla Hill rising 1,988 feet, Ben More, 2,035 feet and Stielaval, 1,227 feet above sea level. The parish is in Long Island poor combination, and includes the isles Benbecula, Eriskay, Fladda, Grimsay, Calvay and Wiay. There are one Established and one Free church, and two Roman Catholic chapels, and eight public schools in the parish.

Lochboisdale is a village near the southern extremity of the parish, situated on a loch of the same name; it has a pier.

The Island of Benbecula lies between North and South Uist. Prince Charles Edward after his retreat from Culloden landed at Rossinish Point in this island, in April, 1846, and remained until the 28th June, when he left for Skye under the guidance of Flora Macdonald.

Fairs are held in May, on the Wednesday before Portree; July, Friday after Inverness sheep and wool fair, and in September on the Friday before Sligachan fair. The area comprises 90,099 acres; the population in 1891 was 5,821, and in 1881, 6,078.
